3 (Proceedings delayed)

4 (10.15 am)

5 LADY SMITH: Good morning, and welcome to the closing 6 submissions in relation to Phase 8 of our case study 7 hearings, this phase which started a rather long time 8 ago.

9 I want at the beginning to thank everybody who has 10 engaged in this lengthy and detailed phase of evidence.
11 I know that Mr MacAulay is going to just summarise some 12 more detail of what we have achieved. We couldn't have 13 done it without the cooperation, engagement and 14 dedication, if I can say, of so many who have helped us 15 get to where we are today.

16 We are going to hear from a number of people today, 17 tomorrow afternoon and Friday, at the end of which we 18 will have heard from everybody who has had leave to 19 appear in this phase and has contributed to the work 20 that we have done.

21 First of all, we will start by hearing from 22 Mr MacAulay, counsel to the Inquiry. Mr MacAulay.

23 Closing submissions by Mr MacAulay

24 MR MACAULAY: Yes, good morning, my Lady.

25 There has been a slight hiccup, which is why we are 1           15 minutes later than we had intended.

2   LADY SMITH:   Yes.

3   MR MACAULAY:   That might have an impact on the running 4           order, but we will see as we go along.

5   LADY SMITH:   Yes, I think we will just play that by ear, if 6           you can bear with me I will let you know what's 7           happening.

8   MR MACAULAY:   As your Ladyship has just said, we are now 9           entering the stage of concluding submissions of this 10          case study that has formed Phase 8 of your Ladyship's
11          Inquiry.

12                The focus of this case study has been on residential 13          accommodation provided or used by the state between 1930 14          and 2014 to accommodate two classes of young people.

15                First of all, young offenders under the age of 18, 16          including children and younger persons under 18 awaiting 17          trial.

18                Secondly, children and young persons under 18 in 19          need of care and protection.

20                These are the two broad categories and I will return 21          to that shortly.

22                The accommodation that has been looked at was 23          managed by a range of providers, including local 24          authorities, religious bodies, voluntary bodies and also 25          the Scottish Prison Service, as now known.

1           26 parties have leave to appear and, as your 2           Ladyship has said, over the next three days will have 3           the opportunity to make closing submissions.

4           A timeline has been prepared and parties have been 5           told when it is expected that submissions will be made.

6           In the main, the providers of care, including,
7           I think, INCAS, will make submissions today, tomorrow,
8           and early into Friday.

9           Thereafter those with a more generic interest will 10          make submissions, with submissions on behalf of the 11          Scottish Government timetabled for the end of the 12          submission process.

13          I then set out the background that the case study 14          comprised of 12 chapters, beginning with the Scottish 15          Prison Service (SPS) Chapter 1, and concluding with 16          Chapter 12 last month, and that included Rossie, 17          Wellington and Edinburgh Secure Services.

18          39 different establishments have been looked at.
19          The case study began with opening statements on the 20          19 September 2023, followed by some introductory 21          evidence over a period of 12 days, and I propose to 22          return to that shortly.

23          Apart from establishments such as the Scottish 24          Prison Service, the focus of the evidence has also been 25          on approved schools, List D schools as they became after

1       the Social Work Act 1968, and when that system came to 2       an end, residential schools.

3           Of the 39 establishments looked at, only five remain 4       in existence for children under 18, which is quite 5       a startling statistic.

6   LADY SMITH:   Yes.

7   MR MACAULAY:  These are the four secure units: the Good 8       Shepherd, Kibble, St Mary's Kenmure and Rossie, the 9       other being St Philip's Plains, and they are all run by 10      charitable organisations.

11          I now want to touch upon the framework document, 12      because that is --

13   LADY SMITH:  Yes, the fact that these are all run by 14      charitable organisations has been commented on by some 15      witnesses, perhaps with a degree of anxiety, that that 16      makes the availability of such provision perhaps more 17      vulnerable --

18   MR MACAULAY:  Yes.

19   LADY SMITH:  -- although there are advantages in other ways, 20      and it may be that the answer is it is just something to 21      be aware of --

22   MR MACAULAY:  Yes.

23   LADY SMITH:  -- and the state needs to be aware of that, 24      they could have to step in at any time.

25   MR MACAULAY:  It may be something your Ladyship may have to 1 look at when she comes to make her findings.

2 LADY SMITH: Yes, indeed, thank you.

3 MR MACAULAY: Moving on then to look at what we refer to as 4 the framework document. That has played an important 5 role in this Inquiry and, to explain, in advance of the 6 case study hearings, over a period from April 2023 to 7 September 2023, with one exception, parties were issued 8 with what has been described as the framework document.

9 The accepted provider was not granted leave to 10 appear until later, and was sent the framework document 11 in February 2024.

12 That document comprised of two parts. Part 1
13 referred to, for example, approved schools, List D 14 schools, secure units and establishments within the 15 jurisdiction of the Scottish Prison Service, and set out 16 material then ingathered or identified by the Inquiry.

17 LADY SMITH: Yes.

18 MR MACAULAY: Part 2 listed a number of potential themes.

19 LADY SMITH: Just before you perhaps go to those themes, 20 Mr MacAulay, I should perhaps interject for anyone 21 listening who hasn't actually seen the framework 22 document, this is a substantial piece of work and it was 23 able to be put together because of the amount of written 24 material that we have been able to recover, the 25 assistance that we received from organisations in

1       answering our very specific questions in quite lengthy 2       statutory orders to them requiring them to answer
3       questions about their history and provision.

4             It meant that we started this long, long phase of 5       work with a background of what looked like some reliable 6       knowledge about quite a number of matters, and then, of 7       course, we built on that as we have gone on through the 8       oral evidence.

9   MR MACAULAY:  I think, to put it another way, we had 10       a running start.

11  LADY SMITH:  We did.

12  MR MACAULAY:  Which made a big difference to how the case 13       study progressed.

14  LADY SMITH:  We did, but this isn't a back-of-the-envelope 15       job, far from it, it is quite a thick volume, as those 16       of you who have studied the framework document will 17       know.

18  MR MACAULAY:  Yes.

19             Part 2 of the document listed a number of potential 20       themes that the Inquiry was able to identify from the 21       materials it had before it.  Some of these themes I set 22       out in the written submission, and I have a list, and 23       I will make reference to some of these, beginning with 24       the forms and prevalence of abuse and comparisons 25       between different kinds of establishment, restraint,

1 corporal punishment and physical abuse, and clearly that 2 was an important matter, because it was identified as 3 an issue by many, many applicants. The use of 4 segregation and isolation as a form of punishment, the 5 organised sexual abuse, or exploitation, of young 6 people.

7 An important theme also that was identified and,
8 indeed, became a matter covered in the evidence, and 9 that was the whole issue of staff recruitment, training 10 and culture. That links into the theme of there being 11 unsuitable staff looking after vulnerable children.

12 Reporting and complaints was a theme that was 13 identified. The knowledge that providers had, and 14 inspectors in particular, and I will look at that in 15 a moment, was also a theme that was identified in the 16 framework document. Management, understaffing and 17 funding was also identified.

18 There is a list there of about 17 or so of themes 19 that were identified in the framework document, and 20 clearly the issue then became: would these themes emerge 21 from the actual evidence?

22 Can I say, my Lady, there has been evidence relating 23 to all the themes that were identified, but some issues 24 stood out. The extraordinary prevalence of physical 25 abuse and grossly excessive punishments under the guise

1 of corporal punishment, and we have had a lot of 2 evidence on that.

3 The use of seclusion, or isolation, as a punishment, 4 sometimes for lengthy periods, sometimes days.

5 LADY SMITH: Mm-hm.

6 MR MACAULAY: There has been evidence also on the propensity 7 of some unsuitable staff, often those in charge, to 8 abuse their power to impose severe physical punishment, 9 and, indeed, sometimes to abuse sexually, and again
10 another theme, more recently, the failure, for example, 11 at St Katharine's and Kerelaw to learn from and apply 12 the lessons of previous inquiries.

13 That is a failure, if I can say, my Lady, that 14 ignored how the care environment could be improved for 15 the children in care.

16 LADY SMITH: Yes.

17 MR MACAULAY: The framework document also contained 18 an appendix setting out the relevant regulatory history 19 as identified in the work of Professor Norrie, but to 20 repeat, the primary purpose of the framework document 21 was to ascertain in advance of the public hearings the 22 extent to which factual matters set out in the framework 23 document were to be challenged, and the basis for any 24 challenges.

25 It is the case that few challenges have been made,

1       and where there have been challenges, the requests have 2       been for amendment of the framework document. Can 3       I say, that really misunderstands the purpose of the 4       framework document, but it certainly is the case that 5       when your Ladyship comes to make findings, your Ladyship 6       will have regard to the challenges that have been made.

7       To the extent that factual material has not been 8       challenged, or disputed, the framework document becomes 9       a document that your Ladyship can draw upon when 10      findings are being made. In that sense, it becomes 11      a document that clearly has served to improve the 12      efficiency of this case study.

13      My Lady, as listed above, a number of potential 14      themes were identified in the framework document from 15      an analysis of the material available to the Inquiry at 16      that time, and in large measure, if the evidence is 17      generally accepted, these themes have emerged from the 18      evidence. Can I then just turn briefly to facts and 19      figures.

20      Having started the case study on 19 September 2023, 21      the evidential hearings were not concluded until last 22      month, on 31 January 2025.

23      If one includes the days set aside for these closing 24      submissions, 154 days will have been spent in hearings.
25      The total number of applicants included in the case

1 study was 554, and 133 applicants have provided oral
2 evidence.

3 LADY SMITH: 454? Not 554.

4 MR MACAULAY: I am sorry, 454.

5 LADY SMITH: Overall 454 applicants and then --

6 MR MACAULAY: 133 have given evidence and another 101
7 non-applicants also gave evidence.

8 LADY SMITH: It is also important to note that although 9 only, 'only', 133 gave oral evidence, we covered the 10 evidence of many other applicants by reading in --

11 MR PEOPLES: Indeed.

12 LADY SMITH: -- in some cases virtually all their 13 statements, in other cases the parts that were relevant 14 to the particular institutions in this case study.

15 MR MACAULAY: The period directly covered by that applicant 16 evidence ranged from the 1950s to the 2000s, with the 17 preponderance of evidence stemming from the 1960s, 1970s
18 and 1980s. These statistics highlight how extensive 19 this particular case study has been.

20 LADY SMITH: Just to add to that timeframe, of course, in 21 the usual way, because the timeframe for this public 22 Inquiry extends back to what is called 'within living 23 memory', and we generally interpret that as back to 1930 24 and ends at the end of 2014, our investigations were 25 always looking at the entirety of that period. But the

1        dates that you have identified, Mr MacAulay, are where 2        we were finding most of the relevant evidence.

3    MR MACAULAY: Yes, indeed, and much of that is explained by 4        the fact that the further back you go, the fewer 5        applicants you will come across, for obvious reasons.

6    LADY SMITH: Yes.

7    MR MACAULAY: It is possible -- and there is one exception 8        to this -- to break down the cohort of applicants by 9        type as to when they enter the care system. Going back 10       to what I said at the beginning, firstly applicants who 11       were offenders and under 18, and applicants under 18 who 12       were in need of care and protection.

13       It is quite striking that of the 454 total number of 14       applicants, 313, approximately two-thirds, entered the 15       care system in need of care and protection. That is 16       quite a striking figure. That is not to say, of course, 17       that having entered the care system, some applicants did 18       go on to commit offences, but that statistic does chime 19       with evidence from applicants of being placed in 20       establishments with children who were offenders, and 21       some applicants found that a very difficult position to 22       be in.

23    LADY SMITH: Yes. Not just applicants, there were one or 24       two other witnesses, other witnesses who commented on 25       these children having been put there because the state

1       assessed them as being in need of care and protection 2       full stop, were living in the establishments shoulder to 3       shoulder with children who were put there because they 4       were seen as having committed offences.
5   MR MACAULAY:  And sometimes serious offences.
6   LADY SMITH:  Serious offences.
7   MR MACAULAY:  Can I say that that statistic of course 8       reflects those formerly in care who came forward to the 9       Inquiry --
10  LADY SMITH:  Yes.
11  MR MACAULAY:  -- and that's an important caveat.
12  LADY SMITH:  Mm-hm.
13  MR MACAULAY:  Can I then, my Lady, move on to look at some 14       of the introductory evidence.  The case study began with 15       introductory evidence with input from a number of 16       sources, beginning with Professor Kenneth Norrie on 17       20 September 2023, and culminating with evidence from 18       Professor Andrew Coyle on 6 October 2023.  I will look 19       briefly at some of that evidence.
20       Beginning with Professor Norrie, he had prepared 21       a report in connection with evidence he had previously 22       given, and the intention at this point was to focus on 23       legislation of particular relevance to this case study.
24       He made the point that rules and regulations for various 25       care settings differed on matters such as discipline and

1       punishment, so that vulnerable children in one care
2       setting could be treated differently to vulnerable
3       children in another care setting.

4               Furthermore, a child who had been placed in 5       a particular care setting and moved to a different care
6       setting could be faced with a different punishment 7       regime, a scenario that was bound to cause confusion to 8       the child.

9               As I go on to point out, the evidence in this case 10       suggested that the majority of applicants were in more 11       than one placement, and often in more than one falling 12       within this case study. I set out some examples of 13       applicants who were in eight placements, nine 14       placements, I think, for the last example that I have 15       made reference to, to show how haphazard the approach to 16       the care of these children was over that period of time.

17   LADY SMITH: I think the last one you mention, actually, you 18       counted ten.

19   MR MACAULAY: Ten.

20               I think your Ladyship, in an exchange with my 21       learned friend, Mr Peoples, in Chapter 12, identified 14 22       placements.

23   LADY SMITH: Yes, from early on in that person's life --

24   MR MACAULAY: Yes.

25   LADY SMITH: -- from very early childhood. Constantly

1 moving from place to place.

2 MR MACAULAY: I think a similar picture emerges from the 3 foster care case study.

4 LADY SMITH: Oh yes.

5 MR MACAULAY: Many applicants spoke about not having been 6 provided, at the time, with information about, for 7 example, how long a placement would be for, and if, and 8 when, and where they would be moved.

9 Professor Norrie also drew attention to the 10 importance of the roles played by persons such as 11 headmasters under regulations, specifying that the 12 discipline of an establishment was to be maintained by 13 the personal influence of the person in charge, so that 14 it was entirely up to that person how disciplinarian the 15 environment was to be.

16 He was taken to a number of documents in Scottish 17 Education Department files that had previously been 18 looked at by Professor Levitt, including the document 19 'A History of Heads', dated 29 June 1967, that was 20 written by one of the two inspectors responsible for 21 approved schools at that time, with the conclusion that:

22 'The story certainly does not add up to good 23 selection by managers, or, indeed, to good management.'

24 That was recognised at the time within the 25 inspectorate. That was against a history of 1       resignations of people in charge of named approved 2       schools for a variety of offences, including 'sadistic

3       cruelty', that was for Dr Guthrie's School, 'cruelty' 4       and 'abuse' in Kenmure St Mary's. He also looked at 5       internal office correspondence between officials, 6       including by one of the inspectors, Inspector Murphy, 7       that disclosed that the Inspectorate was well aware of 8       the brutal beatings administered to boys in approved 9       schools, with the conclusion that what was recognised as 10      happening:

11       '... was a reminder of the terrifying power of 12      a headmaster in these schools.'

13       That's the quote from the document, not from 14      Professor Norrie.

15       As I said, that material had previously been looked 16      at by Professor Levitt. From Professor Norrie's 17      perspective, what was being described in that 18      documentation was a general picture of systemic failure
19      rather than, as he said, 'The one bad apple situation'.

20       Professor Norrie also compared the limited powers 21      available historically to the Inspectorate, limited to 22      making recommendations, and the powers available to the 23      Care Commission after 2002 and the enactment of the 24      Regulation of Care (Scotland) Act 2001.

25       The delay in such a significant shift in the 1 inspector's powers was described by Professor Norrie as 2 'shocking and surprising'.

3 In relation to qualification and training, he said
4 that the lack of training and appropriate qualifications 5 had been 'an inexcusable failure' and that even in what 6 he described as the modern welfare state, how:

7 'The state was prepared to tolerate for so long the 8 care of vulnerable children by unqualified, untrained, 9 and inexperienced staff.'

10 Professor Norrie was followed in evidence by 11 Maree Allison. She was the Director of Regulation for 12 the Scottish Social Services Council, otherwise referred 13 to as SSSC.

14 She gave evidence that when the SSSC was set up, it 15 was under the 2001 Act, only 20 per cent of the 16 workforce had relevant qualifications. That's as recent 17 as 2001.

18 LADY SMITH: Yes, not long ago.

19 MR MACAULAY: Yes, and because of the increasingly complex 20 needs of children and young people and professional 21 tasks that required high-level abilities, the SSSC had 22 developed in 2016 a benchmark Scottish Credit and 23 Qualifications Framework (SCQF) for all care workers to 24 be at level 9. That level could include a number of 25 different qualifications, for example an ordinary

1 degree. This benchmark arose out of the Scottish 2 Government's acceptance of recommendations as far back
3 as 2012.

4 LADY SMITH: Yes.

5 MR MACAULAY: This has not yet been implemented, and at the 6 date of giving her evidence, Ms Allison said that they 7 had asked the Scottish Government what their intentions 8 were and they were awaiting a decision regarding 9 implementation.

10 It may be that Ms O'Neill, when she comes to make 11 her submissions, can provide an update on that.

12 LADY SMITH: It would be very helpful if she did so.

13 MR MACAULAY: I then turn to some of the evidence provided 14 on behalf of the Care Inspectorate. That was from 15 Andrew Sloan, who was a team manager, and Helen Happer, 16 a Chief Inspector, and they gave that evidence over 17 a period of two days. The Care Inspectorate do have 18 leave to appear and so are in a position to develop 19 their position in their closing submissions.

20 What I would say at this point is that there was 21 a recognition by them that when the Care Commission was 22 set up there was a clear need for change, because prior 23 to implementation of the 2001 Act, the inspector regime
24 was 'outdated', by which was meant there was a clear 25 desire to move inspection away from the organisations

1       who were commissioning the service, for example local 2       authorities, to a much more independent body, and 3       provide for consistent national standards.

4           One question your Ladyship may wish to address, as 5       indeed suggested by Professor Norrie: was this change so 6       belated that children in care were unnecessarily exposed 7       to abuse because of a defective inspection system?

8           What is clear from this evidence is that the prior 9       inspection process, as Professor Norrie claimed, risked 10      inconsistent approaches by different local authorities.
11      He described the approach as 'fragmented'.

12          In their evidence, Mr Sloan and Ms Happer went on to 13      describe how the present system has developed with the 14      involvement of what was called a quality framework 15      approach. They went on to describe the challenges that 16      they faced as an Inspectorate, and that in particular 17      they are very dependent on what they see during 18      an inspection and what they are told, and especially 19      what information they could acquire from young people.

20          That is a challenge because, from the perspective of 21      the young people, the inspectors are strangers.

22      LADY SMITH:   Mm-hm.

23      MR MACAULAY:  They are also dependent on the particular 24      service's honesty in informing them of potential issues.

25          Ms McManus, who I go on to look at, gave evidence on

1       behalf of Education Scotland. Education Scotland is the 2       successor to Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Education, 3       and other organisations involved in education, and was 4       established really quite recently, in July 2011. It was 5       established as an executive agency of the Scottish 6       Government.

7       She had also given evidence in the boarding school 8       case. She was the Strategic Director for Security for 9       Education Scotland, and in that role had a role to play 10      in connection with inspection.

11      Education Scotland provided a number of reports, and 12      I have listed the reports. I am moving on to the 13      following page. One of the documents they provided was 14      referred to as annexe A, and that was a document that 15      extended to 612 pages of establishment reviews relevant 16      to this case study that was based on their examination 17      of all available records.

18      It was clearly a significant piece of work, and one 19      of the reports they produced provides a summary of what 20      they found.

21      In short, the records referred to in annexe A show 22      that over many years, children accommodated in 23      establishments under investigation in this case study 24      were subjected to practices, conditions and regimes that 25      were abusive. The conclusion arrived at based on that

1 material was the remit of the Inspectorate historically 2 was insufficient to protect children in care. That was 3 their conclusion.

4 LADY SMITH: Of course that takes us back to how late in the 5 day it was that the Care Commission --

6 MR MACAULAY: Yes.

7 LADY SMITH: -- was created.

8 MR MACAULAY: Indeed.

9 LADY SMITH: Before then the only outside eye you could look 10 to, really, was Education Scotland, or something 11 commissioned by the particular local authority, for 12 example, on an ad-hoc basis.

13 MR MACAULAY: The message here, my Lady, is that they had 14 the material there to tell them --

15 LADY SMITH: Yes.

16 MR MACAULAY: -- that children historically were being 17 abused and that the Inspectorate historically was 18 insufficient in its powers to protect children in care.
19 Indeed, I think she accepted, under questioning, that 20 she was unable to point to evidence in those records as 21 to how the known abuse was responded to.

22 The other point, I think, that she made was that the 23 catalogue of references to abuse contained in the 24 records was acknowledged as likely not to represent the 25 true nature and extent and scale of the abuse of 1 children in the care of the state. I think we have seen 2 that in other case studies. We are just getting 3 a glimpse into the extent of the abuse that was being 4 perpetrated.

5 LADY SMITH: You have an organisation that didn't have 6 sufficient powers. It had information that had red 7 flags on it. The answer could be well, they didn't have 8 the statutory powers to do anything specific about it, 9 but at the very least they could have raised that issue:
10 'We are seeing problems, we are seeing matters that are 11 extremely concerning, what is somebody -- the state, for 12 example -- going to do about this, because it doesn't 13 seem that we have the power to intervene and take 14 action?'

15 MR MACAULAY: Education Scotland was an agency of the state.

16 LADY SMITH: Indeed.

17 MR MACAULAY: In summary, Education Scotland accepts that 18 it, and in particular its predecessors, were aware of 19 the abuse and harmful practices in a number of relevant 20 establishments.

21 Against that whole background, she repeated in 22 person the acknowledgement that children were abused and 23 the apology made by Education Scotland in its response 24 to the Inquiry.

25 What also emerged from her evidence is that the

1       Scottish Ministers took the decision in June 2021 to 2       relieve Education Scotland of its inspection function in 3       recognition of the need for a more independent
4       inspectorate. When she gave evidence, there was no
5       draft bill, but the Programme for Government 2023/2024
6       did include a commitment to introduce an education bill 7       that would include a provision for the creation of 8       an independent inspectorate.

9       By looking at the SG website, it is the case there 10      is now a draft bill making its way through the 11      parliamentary system. Again, Ms O'Neill might be able 12      to give us an update on that.

13   LADY SMITH: That's a shift from an agency to a completely 14      independent inspectorate?

15   MR MACAULAY: No doubt to mirror the shift to the Care
16      Commission and the Care Inspectorate.

17   LADY SMITH: And, as we have also seen in this phase, the 18      Inspectorate of Prisons?

19   MR MACAULAY: Yes, indeed.

20   LADY SMITH: Yes.

21   MR MACAULAY: But I think the Inspectorate of Prisons still 22      remains an executive agency of the Scottish Government, 23      and I will perhaps just touch upon that.

24   LADY SMITH: It may do. But the inspector herself is 25      an independent statutory appointment.

1 MR MACAULAY: It is.

2 LADY SMITH: It is a public appointment. She,
3 Wendy Sinclair, even made a point of explaining that and 4 certainly regarded herself as entirely independent.

5 MR MACAULAY: Yes. I am reminded, I think she is 6 a statutory appointment --

7 LADY SMITH: Yes.

8 MR MACAULAY: -- albeit, I think, paid by the Scottish 9 Government --

10 LADY SMITH: Yes.

11 MR MACAULAY: -- and the staff are also paid by the Scottish 12 Government.

13 LADY SMITH: Sorry, I digress.

14 MR MACAULAY: Moving on in fact to the Scottish Prison 15 Service, as it is now known. There was also evidence in 16 this introductory phase from witnesses who had been 17 involved with the prison service. Although much of this 18 evidence is important from a historical perspective,
19 because children under 18 were accommodated in SPS 20 establishments. As I mention shortly, that position has 21 changed. I don't propose to look at this evidence in 22 any detail at this stage, but can I say in broad terms, 23 the evidence here from the witnesses who gave evidence 24 was that they were in agreement that under 18s should 25 not have been in the prison service, and that the prison

1 estate generally was not in a good state, although much 2 had been done to improve it.

3 One of these witnesses was Sue Brookes, who gave 4 evidence about the evolution of SPS since she joined as 5 an assistant governor in 1987. While governor at 6 Polmont between 2012 and 2017, and at that time she said 7 Polmont accommodated 16- and 17-year olds, but in 8 certain circumstances also 15-year olds, she was part of 9 an aim to create a learning environment for young people 10 as well as seeking to reduce the incidence of bullying 11 and self-harming. In that connection, she introduced 12 a range of initiatives, and I set some of that out 13 there.

14 The general aim going forward was to make SPS 15 an organisation that takes a trauma-informed approach to 16 the care and management of all persons in SPS
17 establishments. As I mentioned a few moments ago, it 18 was her view that in any civilised society, no child 19 should have been detained in a penal establishment.

20 Professor Andrew Coyle gave evidence. He had 21 a lengthy connection as a governor and in other roles
22 with the Scottish Prison Service between 1973 and 1991, 23 including being, I think, an assistant governor at 24 Polmont Borstal between 1976 to 1978.

25 One of the comments he made -- and this has been

1 reflected in the evidence -- is that during his period
2 with the Scottish Prison Service, he encountered many 3 individuals who made what he described as 'the typical 4 journey' through the care and justice system, including 5 borstal and young offenders' institution and from there 6 to adult prisons, including in some cases to His 7 Majesty's Prison in Peterhead, which he described as 8 'the bleak fortress'.

9 Indeed, when he became governor of Peterhead in the 10 1980s, he encountered prisoners he had met in Polmont
11 years earlier, so much so that they were on first name 12 terms from the outset. He spoke of a strong push on the 13 part of former chief inspectors of prisons, such as 14 Dr Andrew McLellan, to have under 18s taken out of SPS 15 custody.

16 He gave evidence more generally about attempting to 17 reduce the Scottish prison population, and, from around 18 1990 onwards, to bring about a change of culture 19 involving better training for prison staff and caring in 20 a more humane and human rights compliant way for 21 prisoners. But he went on to say there were and still 22 are no qualifications required of prison officers, in 23 contrast to other organisations.

24 He went on to say on page 14 that the key to a good 25 prison service -- he described this as a cliché --

1 depends on the relationship between staff and detainees 2 and the ethos and atmosphere of the environment, and 3 that may look self-evident to most people. There is 4 also a need for an independent and transparent 5 complaints system, and he appeared to favour 6 an independent complaints body with power to entertain 7 and adjudicate on complaints by prisoners.

8 LADY SMITH: Professor Coyle also provided us with at least 9 one interesting example of how modelling the right way 10 to treat prisoners works if you are the leader, 11 modelling it as the leader --

12 MR MACAULAY: Yes.

13 LADY SMITH: -- and modelling it in a way that other staff 14 see, and making it clear to other staff how they should 15 treat those who are detained.

16 MR MACAULAY: He made it perfectly clear that the governor, 17 and the examples he gave, just like a headmaster at 18 a school.

19 LADY SMITH: Yes.

20 MR MACAULAY: Has to play such a critical role.

21 LADY SMITH: Yes, and one of the key aspects of it is 22 showing respect for the person who is in the residential 23 institution, particularly if they have been detained 24 there against their will.

25 MR MACAULAY: He was critical in some respects of the 1           current mechanisms for inspection and monitoring.

2   LADY SMITH:   Yes.

3   MR MACAULAY:   And he thought, unlike

4           Wendy Sinclair-Gieben -- that I will look at in

5           a moment -- that the Prison Inspectorate in Scotland

6           should have some powers of enforcement, because

7           Wendy Sinclair-Gieben disagrees with that. But he did

8           balk, I think, at the idea of actually giving the 9           Inspectorate the power to shut a prison down. I suppose

10          if one looks to a prison like Barlinnie, that probably 11          explains why he wouldn't go quite that far.

12   LADY SMITH:   No.

13   MR MACAULAY:   He went on to say that while in many ways the 14          Scottish Prison Service had changed 'beyond recognition'

15          since he started there in 1973, he also said it is 'in 16          other ways, it's old wine in new bottles'. He in 17          particular identified the pressure of numbers on the 18          system, which militated against real progress, as well

19          as the largely Victorian prison estate and that the 20          issue of staff training also remained a major issue.

21   LADY SMITH:   We know, from what we read in the press,

22          amongst other places, that that pressure of numbers has 23          not gone away.

24   MR MACAULAY:   No.

25   LADY SMITH:   It hasn't diminished since the autumn of 2023

1           at all.

2   MR MACAULAY:  Yes.  I think we know also that, if we take

3           Barlinnie as an example, that it appears to be in 4           a fairly bad way --

5   LADY SMITH:  Yes.

6   MR MACAULAY:  -- with the expectation at some point of there

7           being a new prison.

8   LADY SMITH:  Yes.

9   MR MACAULAY:  Another witness who gave evidence in 10          connection with this area was Alec Spencer, on Day 379.

11          He had joined the Scottish Prison Service in 1972,

12          initially as an assistant governor, and he worked in 13          various establishments, including Glenochil, and I think

14          also in Polmont Borstal, in various positions.

15          He described Glenochil as being a place -- we heard

16          this in other evidence -- where the philosophy was that 17          of the short, sharp shock.  At one point he said this 18          would really be a licence to impose harsh treatment, and 19          so far as Polmont Borstal was concerned, he said that 20          the edge between discipline and brutality became 21          blurred.  That's how he put it.

22          He did provide the Inquiry with a transcript of 23          an audio recording from a former inmate at Glenochil who 24          went there in 1968, which was received in March 1985 by 25          the Dr Chiswick inquiry into suicides at Glenochil.

1       That transcript, which I think it may have been read to 2       your Ladyship during this chapter --

3   LADY SMITH:   Yes.

4   MR MACAULAY:  -- describes various abusive incidents 5       involving that former inmate and other boys.  He also 6       described how he himself dealt with an allegation of 7       inappropriate behaviour by a chief officer in about 8       1987, and the allegation being that this officer would 9       sit young offenders on his lap in his office and, in so 10      doing, put a covering over the window of the office door 11      to conceal his activity.  He spoke to the officer, who 12      didn't deny the allegation.  He suggested to the officer 13      that he should end his employment, failing which the 14      matter would be reported to the police.  The officer
15      resigned and, having done so, Mr Spencer took no further 16      action.

17         One of the important general points he made during 18      his evidence was that in a closed environment there is 19      always an imbalance of power between staff and 20      residents, and in such an environment abuses through, 21      for example, the abuse of power, can occur.  As he put 22      it, prisons are a very coercive environment.  He too 23      favoured the abolition of imprisonment for under 18s.

24         We have already mentioned Wendy Sinclair-Gieben who 25      gave evidence that she was the Chief Inspector of 1 Prisons, a position she had held since 2018, she 2 resigned in 2024. She did provide evidence about the 3 history of His Majesty's Inspectorate for Prisons in 4 Scotland, and I think they also have leave to appear --

5 LADY SMITH: They do.

6 MR MACAULAY: -- so no doubt will provide your Ladyship will 7 submissions later on.

8 She explained how the current monitoring system, 9 that she referred to as the independent monitoring 10 system, using volunteers, would report to the chief 11 inspector and they would inspect, to use that word, on 12 a weekly basis, whereas the Inspectorate itself would 13 inspect once every four years. She also gave evidence 14 about the inspection process, including the use of 15 standards, grades and quality indicators as part of that 16 process. She made it clear that the Inspectorate's role 17 was to contribute to preventing abuse, rather than 18 detecting abuse, and indeed that was the same message 19 from the Care Inspectorate. As your Ladyship pointed 20 out, whilst the chief inspector is a statutory 21 appointment, her staff are employed by Scottish 22 Government.

23 She described the current complaints process.
24 Complaints are not investigated by the independent
25 monitors or the Inspectorate. The two available routes

1       were through a prison service process or through the 2       NHS, but in given cases, reports would be made to the 3       police.

4           She did say that her fundamental belief is that 5       those under the age of 18, if they require to be 6       detained in secure conditions, need 'a therapeutic 7       environment' that looks at their identified needs and 8       starts to work with them. Keeping children in prison 9       was contrary to international rights, conventions and 10      standards.

11          She also described how constant issues for the 12      Prisons Inspectorate over the years were how much time 13      a prisoner, or young person, would have out of cell --

14      LADY SMITH: Yes.

15      MR MACAULAY: -- against evidence that they could be locked 16      in a cell for 23 hours a day, and meaningful activity 17      for young people, especially young people on remand.

18          Another issue was that those detained very rarely 19      had a proper understanding of their rights, and she also 20      mentioned the segregation of young people being another 21      issue.

22          She went on to say that there had never been any 23      legislative requirement for prison staff to have 24      particular qualifications, and there was no workforce 25      regulator similar to that of the SSSC that could

1       prescribe minimum qualifications and, through a system
2       of compulsory registration, effectively terminate 3       employment of a prison officer who abused children or 4       posed them a risk of harm.

5             She talks about the enforcement issue, to confirm 6       that the chief inspector has no powers of enforcement, 7       there was no system of registration for prisons, as 8       there is for the Care Inspectorate. She did not favour 9       having powers of enforcement, such as the power to issue
10      directives, unlike Professor Coyle, because she thought 11      that that would impact upon her good relationship with 12      the prisons, and I think may have regretted saying this, 13      but she referred to the prisons as 'a critical friend'.

14   LADY SMITH: Yes, yes. That she was the critical friend.

15   MR MACAULAY: Yes, she was the critical friend.

16   LADY SMITH: Yes.

17   MR MACAULAY: I think she was pressed on that.

18             She said that prisoners at every inspection would 19      tell inspectors they have no confidence in the 20      complaints system, that prisoners would prefer 21      an independent complaints body rather than, as at 22      present, the SPS investigating complaints other than 23      those which meet the threshold of police involvement.

24             My Lady, moving on to the Scottish Prison Service, 25      the first chapter of the case study focused on the

1 Scottish Prison Service and in particular applicants who 2 had been in a prison environment. In that context, 3 therefore, it is worth mentioning the important change 4 that has emerged, since that evidence was given, as to 5 what young people will come within the prison service
6 and the Children (Care and Justice) (Scotland) Act 2004
7 came into force on 16 July 2024.

8 That Act made a number of changes in relation to how 9 children are dealt with within the justice system. For 10 example, the meaning of 'a child' in the Criminal 11 Procedure (Scotland) Act 1995, and that's section 307, 12 is amended to mean a child under 18, rather than under 13 16.

14 I think, and again Ms O'Neill maybe will be able to 15 clarify this, that provision came into force on the 16 29 August of last year. That change of meaning extended 17 the jurisdiction of the children's hearings to include 18 under 18s and not just under 16s.

19 LADY SMITH: Yes.

20 MR MACAULAY: In essence, that removed young people out of 21 the prison system.

22 That has, of course, already been happening in 23 practice, because, as at September 2023, there were only 24 five or six young people under 18 in young offenders' 25 institutions.

1           I then go on to a section that is focusing on 2           applicants. I begin by saying I do not intend to 3           rehearse the evidence of the many applicants who gave 4           evidence in 12 chapters in the course of this case 5           study. I have already mentioned the prevalence of 6           physical and sexual abuse, and abuse practices.

7           The message from many of them, and can I say this is 8           really acknowledged across the board by the providers, 9           and corroborated in contemporaneous records, is that 10          they were subject to abusive regimes whilst in care.

11          As your Ladyship will recollect, there have been 12          a significant number of convictions --

13   LADY SMITH: Yes.

14   MR MACAULAY: -- relating to the physical and sexual abuse 15          of children in care. The earliest conviction of which 16          the Inquiry is aware is actually way back in 1936, which 17          involved a janitor who was convicted of a number of 18          assaults.

19   LADY SMITH: Is that the conviction in relation to which we 20          have documents, a transcript of the proceedings, or some 21          of the proceedings?

22          Yes, I think Mr Sheldon's nodding his head.

23   MR MACAULAY: Nodding of heads, my Lady.

24   LADY SMITH: It is really quite detailed, and gives us 25          particular insight into how things were handled at that

1           time.

2   MR MACAULAY:  Yes, it gives an insight into what disposals 3           were done.

4   LADY SMITH:  Yes.

5   MR MACAULAY:  What I would like to do, my Lady, is focus in 6           connection with applicants on these particular themes:
7           the impact upon their lives that they associated with 8           the abuse they suffered and the legacy that those who 9           ought to have cared for them inflicted upon them.
10          Secondly, their motivations for giving evidence.
11          Thirdly, that as children, in the main, they did not 12          report abuse, and when they did, they were not heard.

13                I go on to look at impact and, across all 14          establishments, applicants spoke of that impact, often 15          lifelong, that their experiences in these settings left 16          with them.  I set out some common themes.  Having a lack 17          of trust in people was a significant impact for this 18          cohort of applicants.

19   LADY SMITH:  Yes.

20   MR MACAULAY:  Because it affected the way in which they 21          dealt with people all their lives, particularly people 22          in authoritative positions.

23                The second impact: a negative impact on education 24          and lifelong learning.  This particular theme was not in 25          fact foreshadowed in the framework document, but many

1 applicants did describe the failure to provide any 2 adequate education and what impact that had on their 3 lives.

4 The irony here is that in many cases children were 5 sent to approved or List D schools because they were not 6 attending mainstream schools.

7 LADY SMITH: Yes.

8 MR MACAULAY: Applicants also spoke about an inability to 9 form and maintain relationships, the fear of a feeling 10 of shame about sharing their experiences with, for 11 example, partners and family and the belief that being 12 in these settings in the first place introduced them to 13 a life of crime, in that that's where they learned how 14 to become involved in such a life.

15 We have also had evidence about the impact on the 16 mental health of some applicants in many cases leading 17 to addiction to alcohol and/or drugs.

18 I go on to say, my Lady, that in terms of their 19 lives now, some applicants provided evidence that they 20 were in a more positive place than they had been in 21 relation to the impact. In some cases, the evidence was 22 that this happened through a particular relationship 23 with a partner or a successful family life. Others 24 spoke of a change in their lives coming about by their 25 realising they were able to make a positive contribution

1 to the lives of others, or society more generally.

2 In relation to motivations, a number of applicants 3 wished to make clear that they were providing their 4 evidence not only to share their recollections of their 5 own treatment in these settings, but also the experience 6 of others, siblings or friends, who are no longer able 7 to share their own experiences. Many also wanted their 8 voices to be heard so that children in the future would 9 not be exposed to abuse.

10 Insofar as reporting is concerned, the evidence of 11 many, indeed if not most, of the applicants throughout 12 this case study was they did not report what was 13 happening to them in these settings at the time. Some 14 said they had no one to tell. Some said they had been 15 scared to do so. Some feared that reporting would have 16 made their situation worse, and some said that as 17 children they did not know what was happening to them 18 constituted abuse.

19 The evidence of many was that they feared they would 20 not be believed. Some applicants described being warned 21 not to report and being told there could be real 22 consequences for themselves or their families if they 23 did so. Many applicants did not recall anyone from 24 external agencies visiting these settings. Some said 25 there may have been officials visiting, but that the

1 purpose was not to speak to the children. Some 2 applicants spoke of not seeing, or having contact with,
3 their own social workers for years while in a particular 4 setting.

5 Some applicants did speak about reporting abuse,
6 including to family members, staff, social workers, 7 police, and, indeed, to the Children's Panel. The 8 evidence suggested that in the main such reports were 9 not investigated or passed on.

10 Throughout this phase, this case study, there was 11 evidence from applicants and former staff that there was 12 a lack of mechanism almost across the board in the 13 settings considered for any such reporting by children, 14 including for follow up and investigation and,
15 importantly, for any support being provided for a child 16 who made a report. As time went on, such mechanisms did 17 emerge, and establishments such as Kibble and 18 St Philip's were transformed, really, in the more recent 19 past.

20 So my Lady, to conclude, this has been a major case
21 study. If the evidence is accepted, and, to repeat, it 22 has not been challenged by providers, and, indeed, 23 providers have acknowledged that there was widespread 24 abuse of children in care, then your Ladyship may have 25 little difficulty in concluding that there were abusive

1 regimes and systemic failures.

2 When allied with the evidence of Professor Levitt 3 from his analysis of the available records, some of 4 which were put to Professor Norrie, and other records
5 available, as, for example, identified by Education
6 Scotland, there is a basis for your Ladyship to conclude 7 that the state knew that abusive regimes existed and 8 that the state failed to protect children in its care.

9 LADY SMITH: Indeed.

10 MR MACAULAY: My Lady, those are my submissions.

11 LADY SMITH: Thank you very much, Mr MacAulay.

12 I now would like to invite Ms McCall, who is here on 13 behalf of the INCAS, to present their closing 14 submissions.

15 Ms McCall, when you are ready.

16 Closing submissions by Ms McCall on behalf of INCAS

17 MS MCCALL: My Lady, can I first of all apologise for not 18 being here in the scheduled slot. I appreciate the 19 Inquiry puts time and thought into the order of 20 submissions. There was a simple diary error at our end, 21 so my apologies for the inconvenience.

22 LADY SMITH: My thanks to you for getting here as quickly as 23 you can, I am grateful to you.

24 MS MCCALL: My Lady, turning, then, to the closing 25 submissions for INCAS.

1           At the close of this case study, INCAS reiterates
2           the importance of remembering that all children
3           accommodated in the institutions with which this case 4           study is concerned were vulnerable. They were removed 5           from their families and communities and placed into the 6           care of the state, sometimes very far from home.

7           Whether they were sent to an establishment because 8           they were alleged to have committed offences, because 9           they were failing to attend school, or because they were 10          in need of care and protection, they all deserve to be 11          treated with dignity and respect. But the evidence in 12          this case study has shown time and again that staff lost 13          sight of the fact that these were children with 14          individual needs who deserved support and protection.

15          In their opening submission for this case study, 16          INCAS set out what they believed the evidence would 17          show, and sadly their belief has again proved to be well 18          founded. Children were subjected to abuse of every 19          kind; physical, sexual, emotional. They were abused by 20          staff, they were abused by their peers and often with 21          impunity. They were treated not as children but, as one 22          witness put it, as prisoners with no rights.

23          Rather than invite particular findings in relation 24          to individual institutions or in respect of specific 25          examples of abuse, which findings we anticipate your

1 Ladyship will make in any event, this closing submission 2 endeavours to draw together some common themes that have 3 emerged from the evidence, and set out INCAS's hopes for 4 the future. Where examples are mentioned of particular 5 institutions or individuals, they are chosen simply to 6 illustrate the issues that came up time and again in the 7 evidence.

8 First of all, dealing with placement of children.
9 The evidence has shown a failure to place children
10 appropriate to their needs and the reasons for them 11 requiring care. Children who were in need of care and 12 protection were accommodated alongside children who were 13 alleged to or had committed criminal offences. Children 14 were admitted for a litany of reasons: parental neglect, 15 failure to attend school, family breakdown, as well as 16 for criminal offending, ranging from the minor to 17 serious offences, including sexual offences. The state 18 failed to view children as individuals with their own, 19 often complex, needs. As 'Cathy' put it in relation to 20 Langlands Park:

21 'Someone like me should never have been in the 22 school in the first place. I wasn't in gangs. I wasn't 23 a criminal. All I was doing was not going to school
24 because I was scared.'

25 Children may have been accommodated initially

1       because of, for example, a failure to attend school or 2       because of changes in their families, but they 3       progressed through a number of increasingly secure 4       residential homes until they ended up caught up in 5       a life of crime. The Inquiry's heard numerous examples
6       from witnesses, one such was 'Ray', he had initially 7       been placed at Smyllum after his mother died and his 8       father couldn't cope. He was then at Calder House, 9       St Ninian's, St Philip's, St Joseph's and Rossie. He 10      suffered and witnessed abuse. From there, he found 11      himself in Longriggend, and on to Barlinnie, and 12      Glenochil. He described being in and out of prison for 13      most of his life. As he put it:

14             'My time in care has shaped and defined my life.
15      The abuse has obviously really affected my life. I had 16      never really thought about it until recently. My life's 17      been hell. Being in and out of borstal and prison was 18      my life. Being locked up was all I'd ever known until 19      I met my wife and had three kids.'

20             The progression of 'Ray' and those like him from 21      care to prison was entirely predictable and significant 22      steps ought to have been taken to prevent it.

23             Dealing with the nature of the regime. In INCAS'
24      submission, the system of List D and residential schools
25      was not fit for purpose. Many who were accommodated

1       there had been traumatised already by their life
2       experiences. The regime in these institutions not only 3       failed to take account of the children's experience of 4       trauma, but in many instances compounded it. Witnesses 5       described in essence a military regime at many 6       institutions, rather than one of care. There was no 7       sense that staff saw children as individuals to be 8       guided and nurtured. Rather, the ethos appears to have 9       been one of brutalising children into conforming or 10      submitting to authority.

11       In terms of education, another repeated theme was 12      the lack of education provided to children. As was 13      acknowledged, for example, by CrossReach in respect of 14      Ballikinrain, Geilsland and Langlands Park, the level of 15      education was poor.

16       At Larchgrove, the Bennett and Righton report found 17      that there was not one qualified teacher in the 18      classrooms, but even after that review, the Inquiry 19      heard evidence of children placed at Larchgrove as 20      a result of non-attendance at school, only to receive no 21      education there either.

22       At Cardross Park it has been recognised that the 23      education provision was limited at best. There was no 24      intention or effort to motivate children to learn. In 25      lessons, artistic activities were provided, which are,

1       of course, important but not as a replacement for 2       academic endeavour.

3             At Thornly Park it appeared boys were made to work 4       instead of being educated, although there was some 5       evidence that they were given a couple of hours of basic 6       reading and writing.

7             It was a similar story across a range of 8       establishments, and no doubt there were a variety of 9       reasons why education was not prioritised. There was 10      evidence of staff shortages, lack of staff training to 11      deal with learning difficulties, poor handovers from 12      school or social work to the establishment and children 13      already disincentivised from learning.

14            Whatever the reasons, there was no justification for 15      this fundamental failure in the state's duty to provide 16      an education to its children. Vulnerable children were 17      again failed by the system. It's a particular irony 18      that children were sent to these establishments because 19      they were missing out on education through truancy and 20      other reasons, but then received no meaningful 21      education. The attitude of the authorities appears to 22      have been that these children were not expected to 23      achieve anything.

24            Witnesses spoke movingly about the lasting impact 25      lack of education has had on their lives. Some

1       considered that the lack of education resulted in them
2       becoming criminals and spending much of their life
3       incarcerated rather than pursuing their ambitions.

4       Turning to training, there is a body of evidence 5       which would allow the Inquiry to conclude that many 6       staff in secure care establishments were not properly 7       trained. In some instances, the lack of training was 8       known at the time.

9       For example, in 1964 there was a disturbance at 10      Langlands Park. The inspection report which followed 11      identified the cause as the traumatic background of the 12      children and a failure to address that with 13      psychological support. The education department noted 14      that staff had no relevant training and had no time to 15      address these issues in the youngsters.

16      In Larchgrove, a lack of training appears to have 17      been the norm. Bennett and Righton noted:

18      'The overwhelming majority of supervisors are 19      untrained in residential work at any level. It is 20      alarming that the induction procedure for newly 21      appointed supervisors is so haphazard and sketchy.'

22      At Kerelaw, when 'Robert' was employed in 1990, his 23      evidence was that he did not need a childcare
24      qualification, he learned on the job by shadowing 25      others. The Inquiry heard similar evidence from

1        'Peter'. The situation appears to have changed and 2        improved over time with the introduction of assessment
3        and verification of qualifications.

4            Turning then to the use of restraint, the Inquiry 5        has heard a lot of evidence about this. While it is 6        recognised that there may be occasions on which safe 7        holding is necessary, a general theme emerged from the 8        evidence that restraint was used inappropriately and 9        disproportionately to forcibly subdue children. At 10       times restraint was a smokescreen for planned assaults 11       or retribution. As the Frizzell report found in 12       relation to Kerelaw, but this also applies elsewhere, 13       restraint was used as a first rather than a last resort.

14           The Scottish Prison Service have acknowledged that 15       at Longriggend, Glenochil, Barlinnie and Polmont there 16       was disproportionate use of control and restraint. As 17       well as the inappropriate use of restraint, in many 18       places there was a lack of training in restraint for 19       staff. For example, Graham Haddow, a former teacher at 20       Larchgrove, 1981 to 1982, spoke of the lack of training 21       for all staff in relation to holds and restraints.

22           This pattern of inadequate training and 23       inappropriate use of restraint was repeated across many 24       of the institutions the Inquiry has considered.

25           I turn then to seclusion cells and other

1       punishments. There was widespread evidence of the 2       inappropriate use of seclusion or isolation cells. By 3       way of a typical example, the Inquiry has records
4       indicating that at Calder House Assessment Centre, 5       a detention room or cell was used as punishment.
6       Numerous witnesses have described their experience of 7       it. 'Jock' was locked in the cell for three days upon 8       his arrival. 'CC' was held for a week in solitary 9       confinement as a punishment for throwing a bucket of 10      water over a staff member. When she deliberately 11      flooded the cell, she was physically beaten.

12           It was maintained by a former matron there that the 13      room was only used for overnight admissions, or for the 14      safety of the child or others. She did not accept that 15      its use would be abusive and noted that children were 16      visited regularly while they were in there and given 17      something to read. That may be considered illustrative 18      of the failure at an institutional level to recognise 19      what were abusive practices.

20           Aside from seclusion, the Inquiry has heard evidence 21      of a variety of punishments inflicted on children: 22      standing out, being made to stand still and straight for 23      extended periods of time, pindown, having all one's 24      personal belongings removed, extended outdoor runs, 25      scrubbing floors with toothbrushes, stopping visits from 1 family and so on.

2 LADY SMITH: And stopping visits to family, as well.

3 MS MCCALL: Correct, my Lady.

4 LADY SMITH: Yes.

5 MS MCCALL: These appear to have been commonplace across 6 a number of institutions. The Inquiry could conclude 7 that their employment was designed to isolate, humiliate 8 and degrade children. They were on any view an abuse of 9 power by those in authority, none of these methods of 10 punishment were appropriate.

11 Turning then to peer-on-peer bullying and abuse. It 12 is clear from many sources that peer-on-peer bullying 13 was a significant and persistent problem, affecting many 14 of the institutions examined. The attitude in some 15 places was to leave children, in this instance boys, to 16 resolve disputes themselves. For example, the Inquiry 17 heard that one method of staff intervention was to 18 arrange boxing matches between the boys. At Kerelaw, 19 this took the form of what was called horseplay, which 20 downplayed the risks to the boys compelled to take part.
21 The Frizzell report noted that horseplay still went on 22 even after guidance against it was in place.

23 At Larchgrove there was evidence to suggest that 24 organised fighting between boys was a form of 25 entertainment for staff, with cigarettes and alcohol

1       being provided as incentives to participate. Boys who 2       refused to take part may have been physically abused.
3       There was evidence from 'Iain' that the winners were 4       subjected to sexual abuse by staff.

5             Looking then at complaints and inspections. As has 6       been seen in previous case studies, the evidence here
7       has demonstrated once again that children either had no 8       means to complain or if they did complain, they were not 9       listened to or not believed. The evidence relating to 10      Scottish Prison Service establishments demonstrated that 11      their complaints process was not fit for purpose.

12            In terms of the inspection regime, the Inquiry heard 13      numerous examples of problems being identified, but no 14      clear action being documented. Where warnings were 15      issued by inspectors, there appears to have been 16      a failure to follow up to ensure that changes were 17      implemented.

18            One such example was Geilsland School. Inspectors
19      had concerns about the irregular punishment of boys, 20      including hitting and handcuffing them. The issue was 21      raised on a number of occasions with the headmaster and 22      the Church of Scotland board of managers. The board of 23      managers in fact instructed that corporal punishment 24      should cease at the end of 1968, but it continued as 25      a practice until 1983.

1           It has been acknowledged on behalf of Dr Guthrie's 2           School that in certain instances abuse and cruelty was 3           known by others to have taken place, but little or 4           nothing was done.

5           The Inquiry has heard evidence that permits the 6           conclusion that there was a pattern of failure to act on 7           children's complaints, failure to act on inspector's 8           criticisms and failure to follow through to ensure that 9           changes were made.

10          There was, it might be said, a lack of curiosity or 11          concern for what children were experiencing and 12          a failure to join the dots to identify patterns of 13          abuse. It was notable that what triggered the 14          wide-ranging investigation into Kerelaw in 2004 were 15          complaints by staff about bullying and harassment by 16          a unit manager. It was not prompted by the complaints 17          that had been made by children.

18          Children's Rights Officers visiting Kerelaw were 19          said to have been prevented from speaking directly to 20          the children. While there was a complaints procedure in 21          place, it has been acknowledged that compliance was 22          patchy and at times was deliberately frustrated. In the 23          end, the inadequacy and inefficacy of any complaints 24          system that might have existed gave rise to a widespread 25          failure on the part of many of those involved in the 1       system to take responsibility for stopping abuse.

2           Moving on to some positive developments. INCAS 3       welcomes the acknowledgement and apology issued by 4       a number of providers to date in this case study. It is 5       hoped that the apologies are meaningful and translate 6       into support for survivors and into making and 7       sustaining change.

8           INCAS is encouraged by the evidence heard about 9       changes to practice by those who are today responsible 10      for caring for children in these settings, including the 11      introduction in some of trauma-informed practice. Staff 12      working in residential childcare are now registered with 13      the SSSC, providing regulation and oversight which helps 14      ensure consistent standards of professionalism.

15          The introduction of the PVG scheme is also important 16      in protecting children from abusers.

17          The development and introduction of various means by 18      which children can speak to an independent person, 19      whether that's through an app, such as in Aberdeen City, 20      or via independent advocacy services, such as in 21      Inverclyde, is a clear improvement on the experience of 22      past years when children felt they had nowhere to turn 23      if something was troubling them.

24          It is important that monitoring, inspection and 25      learning continues, not just to ensure that bad

1 practices do not re-emerge, but also because learning
2 about best practice is constantly developing. That's 3 illustrated by the general welcome that was extended to 4 the introduction of TCI in the 1990s. 30 years on, as 5 your Ladyship recognised, a more sophisticated 6 understanding is needed.

7 INCAS also hopes that the recent legislative 8 developments incorporating the UN Convention on the 9 Rights of the Child, and prohibiting the detention of 10 under 18s in young offenders' institutions, will prove 11 to be strong tools in securing better care for troubled 12 children in the future.

13 In conclusion, as Janie McManus stated, it is 14 unacceptable that any child was abused or subjected to 15 abusive practice, conditions and regimes. Children 16 attending educational establishments should have done so 17 with the expectation that they would be safe and free 18 from harm. For children who were abused, this was not 19 the case.

20 Referring to reporting about a disturbance at 21 Brimmond, Graeme Simpson summed up an attitude that was 22 far from unique. It does feel as if this was a time 23 when there was little control over the environment 24 within there, and when children don't feel safe and 25 held, they react in ways which are unpredictable, they

1       react in dysregulated ways. In some respects, the 2       children were responding to the conditions in which they 3       were experiencing life, and yet we turn round and we 4       blame the children for their behaviours.

5       INCAS very much hopes that Scotland can finally move 6       beyond the situations that were being described.

7   LADY SMITH: And of course, as witnesses have now explained, 8       children speak through their behaviour.

9   MS MCCALL: They do, very much, my Lady.

10   LADY SMITH: And for too many decades that was not being 11       recognised.

12   MS MCCALL: Very much so.

13   LADY SMITH: Thank you very much, Ms McCall.

14       It is now just after 11.30 am, so I will stop here 15       for the morning break.

16       After the morning break we will move on to, I hope, 17       hearing from Mr Thomson for the De La Salles and the 18       Salesians of Don Bosco.

19   (11.35 am)

20                               (A short break)

21   (11.50 am)

22   LADY SMITH: As I indicated before the break, I would now 23       like to turn to Mr Thomson, who represents the 24       De La Salle Brothers and the Salesians of Don Bosco.

25       Mr Thomson, when you are ready.

1 Closing submissions by Mr Thomson on behalf of the 2 De La Salle Order

3 MR THOMSON: Yes, my Lady, thank you.

4 In the opening statement and closing submission, the 5 De La Salle Brothers gave an unreserved and full apology
6 to all those who were harmed.

7 They do so again today.

8 LADY SMITH: Thank you.

9 MR THOMSON: In their opening statement, the De La Salle 10 Brothers committed to assisting the Inquiry with its 11 investigation into the nature and extent of abuse. They 12 also committed to learn from the past, and participate 13 in any process which improves the protection and care of 14 children. They renew these commitments.

15 Although their association with Scotland finished 16 more than three decades ago, their desire to honour 17 those commitments shall remain undimmed. Improving the 18 protection of children will always be a core ongoing 19 objective.

20 In their opening statement, closing submission and 21 by their entire approach to the Inquiry, the De La Salle
22 Brothers have acted in furtherance of the Inquiry's 23 terms of reference and acknowledged failures on their 24 part.

25 They also accepted the need for them to play a part

1       in creating a national public record of the historic 2       abuse of children in care in Scotland. Attention must 3       be paid.

4       Since the evidence session, the safeguarding lead of 5       the De La Salle Brothers has further assisted the 6       Inquiry by providing an addenda to the part D response.

7   LADY SMITH: Yes, I am grateful for that, Mr Thomson, it was 8       needed, thank you.

9   MR THOMSON: I am obliged, my Lady, thank you.

10       Again, he is here today.

11   LADY SMITH: Thank you.

12   MR THOMSON: It is not proposed to repeat the earlier 13       submissions beyond seeking their adoption as part of the 14       submissions.

15       Some findings in fact. Significant numbers of 16       school-age children suffered traumatic abuse whilst 17       resident at schools and in the care of the De La Salle
18       Brothers. Many of the children came from disadvantaged 19       and challenging backgrounds. The lasting impact on the 20       victims was palpable. Some have not spoken of their 21       experiences for most of their lives. It was also clear 22       from the evidence that family members have been deeply 23       affected. The De La Salle Brothers failed the children
24       who were abused. Those failings were systemic.

25       The failings could have been greatly lessened had

1       the care emphasis been more on listening and less on 2       control. Though not the sole perpetrator, the actions
3       of the unrepentant Michael Murphy should be recognised 4       as particularly serious.

5   LADY SMITH: Yes.

6   MR THOMSON: Alongside the failings of the De La Salle 7       Brothers, there were structural and systemic failings in 8       the governance and oversight of the care of children by 9       other stakeholders, particularly the managers.

10       Addendum response. The addendum document is adopted
11       as part of this closing submission. The addendum 12       discusses what can be taken from the available
13       documentation concerning St Joseph's School, Tranent, 14       and St Ninian's, Gartmore.

15       St Joseph's. Extensive records were retained by 16       East Lothian Council. These include minutes of 17       manager's meetings, daily logbooks, et cetera. The 18       minutes and logbooks are comprehensive, extending over 19       decades. The minutes assist with understanding the 20       governance and management of the school. They also show 21       the composition of the managers and that lay persons
22       were generally in the majority at meetings. The clergy
23       present were generally not the De La Salle Brothers, 24       rather it was archdiocese clergy who attended along with 25       the lay members and in later years the head, who was

1 a member of the De La Salle Brothers. The daily logbook 2 shows regular visitors, such as psychologists, social 3 workers, Her Majesty's Inspectors, et cetera.

4 St Ninian's. Unfortunately the surviving record
5 keeping position is poorer than for St Joseph's.
6 Stirling Council responded to a Freedom of Information
7 request that they had no records. Further, police 8 statements taken in 2000 indicate that many of the 9 school records were destroyed on the instructions of the 10 Scottish Office. The Inquiry has heard evidence that 11 management meetings were held, and the Inquiry has also 12 heard that the management structure was the same as at 13 St Joseph's.

14 Closing comments. The De La Salle Brothers have 15 engaged with the Inquiry in a manner consistent with the 16 deeply held belief that the national public record on 17 abuse should be as comprehensive as possible. Attention 18 must be paid.

19 The De La Salle Brothers, of course, accept that 20 they failed. Those failings were part of wider systemic 21 failures by other parts of the care structure then in 22 place. Points about the managers have already been made 23 in the opening statement and closing submission.

24 The meaning of significant levels of abuse cannot be 25 reduced to numbers alone. That the De La Salle Brothers

1 participated in the teaching and care of almost 9,000 2 school-age children does not reduce the significance of 3 the numbers who gave evidence. The abuse they suffered, 4 its repetition and the lack of belief they encountered 5 when they reported abuse add to the significance of what 6 occurred.

7         Though the De La Salle Brothers ceased to have 8 a presence in Scotland in 1992, that has not and will 9 not prevent it continuing to have close regard to 10 lessons which can be learned from the Inquiry.

11         The International Lasallian Conference took place in 12 Rome in 2024. At the conference, the De La Salle 13 Brothers discussed the Scottish Child Abuse Inquiry.
14 The Inquiry featured in lectures and in plenary 15 sessions, the practical focus being on assisting the 16 understanding and practices of safeguarding personnel 17 who were involved in implementing standards and 18 addressing abuse cases.

19         There is a safeguarding committee which includes 20 experienced external professionals, who ensure that 21 safeguarding policies meet proper expectations and 22 support the safeguarding lead. The trustees of the 23 De La Salle Brothers receive reports from the committee 24 after each meeting, regular meetings are held with the 25 safeguarding lead. All Brothers, staff and volunteers

1       are informed and educated about safeguarding by mandated 2       training. The Brother Provincial and safeguarding lead 3       collaborate with church safeguarding services and local 4       authority designated officers in England and Wales.

5       The De La Salle Brothers have also used their 6       experiences at the Inquiry when making contributions to 7       the updating of safeguarding policies for the Catholic 8       Church in England and Wales.

9       The De La Salle Brothers understand the need for 10      eternal vigilance to listen to and understand the 11      children in their care, to prevent abuse in all its 12      forms by having proper systems in place, and to act 13      quickly when any suspicions arise.

14      The lessons from the Inquiry are being utilised in 15      the De La Salle Brothers' ongoing involvement in the 16      education of children across the world.

17   LADY SMITH: I can see that's a significant point you make, 18      Mr Thomson, although the De La Salles no longer have 19      a presence in Scotland, they do have a presence in many 20      other countries, do I have that right?

21   MR THOMSON: Indeed they have. Attention must be paid and 22      action must be taken, and it is an inculcation into the 23      ongoing DNA of this, if I can put it that way.

24   LADY SMITH: Thank you.

25   MR THOMSON: No part of the De La Salle Brothers remains

1       Archdiocese of St Andrews & Edinburgh on 30 August 2024.

2           That addendum response was prepared in part by 3       examining the extensive records the Salesians of 4       Don Bosco have retained since St John Bosco School
5       closed more than 40 years ago. These records had been 6       provided to the Inquiry to assist in achieving as full 7       an understanding as possible. The records include 8       minutes of the managers' meetings from 1960 to 1983.

9           Again, it is not proposed to repeat the earlier 10       submissions beyond seeking their adoption as part of 11       this submission.

12          Findings in fact. The Salesians of Don Bosco failed 13       children who suffered abuse whilst resident at 14       St John Bosco School, Aberdour, Fife. Most of the 15       children at the school came from disadvantaged and 16       challenged backgrounds. In addition to the obvious 17       suffering as children, the continuing impact on them as 18       adults and the lasting effect upon their families was 19       readily apparent in the descriptions of living with the 20       effects of abuse.

21          The failings could have been greatly lessened had 22       the care of the children stayed close to the 23       preventative system advocated by Don Bosco and developed 24       over the years. Accompanying the failings of the 25       Salesians of Don Bosco were structural and systemic

1 failings in governance and oversight of the care of 2 children at St John Bosco School by stakeholders such as 3 the managers and others.

4 Addendum response. Consequent upon the closing
5 submission made by the Archdiocese of St Andrews &
6 Edinburgh, the Salesians of Don Bosco provided 7 an addendum response to the Inquiry. That addendum is 8 adopted as part of this closing submission.

9 LADY SMITH: Yes, thank you, also for that addendum. Again, 10 it was needed. I am grateful for it, thank you
11 Mr Thomson.

12 MR THOMSON: During the closing submissions of the 13 archdiocese 30 August 2024, it was stated that the 14 archdiocese had no involvement in the Board of Managers 15 at St John Bosco School. The minutes of the meeting of 16 the managers provided to the Inquiry disclose that the 17 archdiocese was involved.

18 In 1964, the Vicar General of the St Andrews and 19 Edinburgh Archdiocese approved in principle the setting 20 up of a Board of Managers.

21 In 1965, the Archbishop gave permission for the 22 establishment of the St John Bosco School on a permanent 23 basis. Clergy of the archdiocese were managers and sat
24 on the Board of Managers, which met regularly.

25 Closing comments. The Salesians of Don Bosco accept 1       that there were serious failings and shortcomings on its 2       part. They have engaged with the Inquiry in a full and 3       transparent manner. They understand the importance of 4       making the national public record on abuse of children

5       as comprehensive as possible. The evidence sessions 6       disclosed serious abuse. In the absence of failings and 7       shortcomings, abuse could have been prevented. The 8       failings were part of wider systemic failures by other 9       stakeholders who formed part of the care structure then 10      in place. Comments about the managers have already been 11      made.

12       The Salesians of Don Bosco set out to do as much 13      good work as was possible for the children who attended 14      St John Bosco School. That much of this aim has been 15      thwarted by failings and shortcomings is a matter of 16      intensive and reflective regret to them. Some 17      applicants had positive memories of the school, this 18      does not detract from the suffering of those who had 19      negative memories.

20       That the Salesians of Don Bosco ceased to have 21      a presence in Scotland in 1983 will not prevent it 22      continuing to have close regard to the lessons which can 23      be learned from the Inquiry and utilised in its ongoing 24      involvement in the education of children across the 25      world.

1 Regional Council in 1996.

2 My Lady, a consequence of that is that management of 3 St Joseph's School transferred to them in 1996, and they 4 were then responsible for closing it in 1998. As 5 a consequence, their involvement was effectively limited 6 to oversight of its closure.

7 There has been no similar establishment in East
8 Lothian since then, but, of course, they remain 9 responsible for the care of children in care and in 10 other settings throughout their area.

11 My Lady, the council has therefore taken this 12 Inquiry and this phase in particular as an opportunity 13 to understand where there have been past failures, how 14 other councils have dealt with and responded to those 15 and where they can be developing and continually 16 improving their own care of children.

17 My Lady, Lindsey Byrne, Head of Children's Services
18 and Chief Social Work Officer, or Emma Clater, Service
19 Manager for Children's Services, and sometimes both, 20 were present via WebEx for all of the evidence relating 21 to St Joseph's and Ms Byrne is present in person today.

22 LADY SMITH: Thank you.

23 MR WATSON: Your Ladyship has heard the closing statement 24 for the council at the end of Chapter 2, and I would 25 adopt that today.

1           But given the council's limited involvement it is 2 perhaps of more utility to look at the themes emerging, 3 and, through that, specific areas where the council has 4 taken action in response to this Inquiry, and where 5 further development is ongoing. Let me address three 6 specific areas of development, my Lady. The first of 7 those being record keeping.

8           Following the Inquiry, and following on from what 9 I said on the last occasion, the council has worked to 10 be increasingly aware of, and sensitive to, the content
11 and audience for social work files. They may be serving 12 a particular professional purpose now, but they will be 13 read by children and young people in the future. These 14 are files that are produced or held by East Lothian 15 Council, but in a real sense belong to the child or 16 young person. That awareness and practice of drafting 17 with deliberate intention is how they are working to 18 shape good practice on record keeping, and on more 19 formal report drafting now.

20          My Lady, they have required staff to undertake 21 training that is focused on the language they used, they 22 use in discussion or in recording information about 23 children, young people and their families. Staff who 24 have completed this training have found it helpful with 25 positive feedback from the latest cohort of 22 from

1 residential settings. They have also been listening to 2 their children and young people in improving their 3 processes, for example using the term 'care experienced' 4 rather than the acronym LAAC, looked after and 5 accommodated children.

6 LADY SMITH: If I may say, that is an enlightened and very 7 easy move. The average person reading a file later on 8 won't have a clue what acronyms stand for.

9 MR WATSON: No, indeed, and over the passage of time 10 acronyms change so quickly.

11 LADY SMITH: I think we all have difficulty with that.
12 Thank you.

13 MR WATSON: My Lady, they are also hosting training and 14 refresher sessions on trauma-informed practice across 15 the council, recognising that children and young people 16 with complex family situations can interact with the 17 council in a number of ways.

18 Although this Inquiry focuses on residential 19 settings, similar issues can arise through schools and 20 for those who provide support on housing issues, amongst 21 others.

22 They are embedding trauma-informed vocabulary in 23 their templates and records, ensuring the young person 24 remains at the centre of those with some documents now 25 being drafted as if they were addressing the child, even

1           when the child is not the immediate recipient.

2           The council has challenged their practitioners to 3           reconsider how behaviour is viewed, understanding that 4           this is a form of communication for children and young 5           people that can offer insight into the challenges and 6           stresses young people are facing. My Lady, one of the 7           witnesses put it as:

8           'Hurt people hurt people.'

9   LADY SMITH: Yes.

10  MR WATSON: These updated practices are now subject to 11           multi-layered review and scrutiny, with not only team 12           managers supporting on constant improvements, but their 13           senior managers, and the chief social work officer, 14           ensuring that case files demonstrate improving practice.
15           These discussions take place at team meetings, 16           supervisions, more formal file audits and staff 17           performance reviews. So it is at all levels, my Lady.

18  LADY SMITH: Yes.

19  MR WATSON: The council recognises that this is a process of 20           continuous improvement and that the child's voice is as 21           essential as active, effective support and training for 22           staff. The council takes its best practice goals 23           extremely seriously and will continue to challenge their 24           templates, processes and skills to refine their practice 25           through formal and informal means.

1           This is one concrete example of the council being 2           a strength and skill set based and outcome-focused 3           service, supporting and modelling behaviour and best 4           practice.

5           Let me just say exactly what that means, my Lady: it 6           means that the council focuses on the strengths and 7           skill sets that their service users and families do 8           possess and work with them to use and empower them to 9           use those. They encourage taking a positive outlook 10          rather than focusing on what strengths or skills might 11          be missing.

12   LADY SMITH: Yes.

13   MR WATSON: Let me turn from record keeping of itself to 14          explanations to and inclusion of children. My Lady, one 15          theme from this phase and others has been the striking 16          lack of space for the voice of the child with those who 17          are caring for them, with the broader council or care
18          organisation and with any independent advocate. East 19          Lothian Council has been addressing that over many years
20          and again I said something of that on the last occasion, 21          but in the intervening months that has continued.

22          The council's practice model promotes the central 23          consideration of all information being shared in a child 24          friendly and accessible way, be that in outlining 25          a current situation or for future planning. The council

1 is committed to information being accessible for every 2 child, whether that's a word and pictures version of 3 information or the need for a meeting to help support 4 a child or young person to understand their situation, 5 and for the plan for them.

6 LADY SMITH: Yes.

7 MR WATSON: My Lady, the child's view remains at the heart
8 of all plans. That's embedded in their promise to 9 keeping The Promise across all aspects of planning 10 reviews and interaction with children, including 11 children's hearing and child's plan review meetings.
12 All files and practices are again subject to independent 13 internal review by independent practitioners to quality 14 assure cases at every stage.

15 The council is also committed to ensuring that every 16 child or young person has access to bespoke advocacy 17 services to promote their rights, needs and views.
18 Currently every child with a looked-after and 19 accommodated status, or those who are invited to 20 children's hearings, are automatically referred to 21 independent advocacy providers. East Lothian Council 22 are additionally working on extending this offer of 23 support to all children and young people who have 24 contact with East Lothian social workers.

25 Finally, my Lady, may I turn to subject access

1 requests. Your Ladyship may recall that on the last 2 occasion there was one former resident who had sought
3 his records. They were not available, save for one 4 logbook entry, and his experience of the process was of 5 not having been assisted at all. The council has 6 continued to review how they can improve that picture 7 for those in care. The council must acknowledge that 8 they operate with a variety of legacy systems and 9 practices which present particular challenges, and, as 10 your Ladyship is aware, many records are simply 11 unavailable.

12 LADY SMITH: Yes.

13 MR WATSON: The council does regret this, and it is a real 14 source of frustration for them and they understand how 15 difficult that must be for a child looking for 16 information which is not held. They do remain committed 17 to ensuring that any interactions with individuals are 18 open, frank and transparent. Again, taking 19 a trauma-informed approach. That means providing full 20 and accessible explanations on why information can't be 21 provided, and ensuring individuals are appropriately
22 supported through those interactions.

23 That includes consideration of whether follow-up 24 meetings, in person or online, would assist in them 25 understanding the response, the information that has

1       been provided, or next steps in their circumstances.

2           The council is also exploring providing additional 3       information such as general information about schools or 4       practices at the relevant times as a way of helping them 5       to understand their own circumstances, either to 6       supplement information that has been available, or in 7       place of information that is not.

8           This is another area where the council is committed 9       to continuous improvement and keeping the child at the 10      centre of their process and practice. It is a reality 11      that they will not always be able to provide the 12      information sought, but the outcome can be delivered in 13      a compassionate and accessible way, ensuring full 14      understanding of the limits of assistance and the 15      supports they can offer.

16          Finally, my Lady, the council has asked me to read 17      their distillation of the hugely significant impact 18      their involvement in the Inquiry has had on them:

19          'The work of this Inquiry has been invaluable. The 20      findings, evidence and information has fundamentally 21      altered the way practitioners think about all aspects of 22      the support we offer to children, from our day-to-day 23      interactions with children, young people and their 24      families, to the way we make decisions and record
25      information. We will continue to improve how we work,

1           and the impact that has on the lives of our children and 2           young people and their families.'

3   LADY SMITH: Thank you, Mr Watson.

4           Whenever you are ready, do feel free to move on to 5           South Lanarkshire Council.

6           Closing submissions by Mr Watson on behalf of 7                           South Lanarkshire Council

8   MR WATSON: I am obliged, my Lady, I do indeed appear on 9           behalf of South Lanarkshire Council, and also present
10          today is Liam Purdie, who is Chief Social Work Officer
11          and Head of Children and Justice Services for South 12          Lanarkshire Council.

13          He was also present to hear the applicant evidence 14          relating to Calder House --

15   LADY SMITH: I remember that, yes.

16   MR WATSON: -- and indeed South Lanarkshire Council's 17          involvement does relate solely to Calder House.

18   LADY SMITH: To Calder House.

19   MR WATSON: Again, your Ladyship will be familiar with the 20          process of aggregation and disaggregation.

21          The council became responsible for Calder House in 22          1996, through to its closure in 2007 and demolition in 23          2012. Your Ladyship has the closing statement I made at 24          the end of Chapter 7, and again I won't repeat any of 25          that, but I invite your Ladyship to include it as part

1 of this submission.

2 Let me turn to specific findings in fact your 3 Ladyship may continue.

4 First, that there was endemic abusive practice at 5 Calder House Assessment Centre. That this was directed, 6 overseen and encouraged by the leadership at 7 Calder House. That there was inappropriate punishment
8 of children; scrubbing, detention cells, distressing 9 delousing, no phone calls, long runs, restriction of 10 clothing, premeditated and calculated approaches to 11 disrupt their evenings. That there were forced strip 12 searches by male staff. That children were 13 inappropriately restrained by members of staff. That 14 there was sexually inappropriate touching of girls.
15 That there was collective punishment of children for 16 minor infractions. That staff had established 17 an inappropriate regime of punishment and reward. That 18 there were inappropriate attitudes to children and 19 offensive and abusive language used directly and in the 20 records and that there was a failure of oversight by the 21 council to recruit, train, supervise and oversee 22 suitably skilled and caring staff, a failure to adopt 23 appropriate formal and informal means of monitoring the 24 care provided and a failure to provide children with any 25 effective means of voicing their concerns, experience

1       and abuse outside Calder House.

2       My Lady, the previous closing statement sets out in 3       more detail where the evidence came for those findings 4       and I would invite your Ladyship to take that into 5       account.

6       Let me use Mr Purdie's words to summarise the care 7       provided:

8       'It was abusive and it was criminal. It was not 9       child centred in any manner or means.'

10       My Lady, let me turn from findings of fact to 11       acceptance of failures. As I have set out, the council 12       accepts that there was abuse at Calder House, and as 13       Mr Purdie said in his evidence, the council accepts that 14       this was systemic, probably from its opening, and then 15       throughout its operation.

16       The council accepts that they failed to prevent 17       abuse occurring and more than that, they failed to have 18       in place care for children that supported and nurtured 19       them. South Lanarkshire Council apologises for that.
20       They apologise to each child who suffered abuse, to each 21       who was not listened to, to each who was not nurtured 22       and to each family that suffered in consequence.

23       Let me set out some specifics of that failure, aside 24       from the pivotal failure to prevent the abuse.

25       First, the culture at Calder House was in no way

1 child centred. It was not focused on the best interests
2 of the children. There was little warmth or 3 understanding from any of the staff as to what those 4 needs were. That culture and practice was directed and 5 endorsed from the top down at Calder House. The culture 6 and the care regime was systemic and endemic.

7 Secondly, record keeping. This relied largely on 8 logbooks which were staff centred. They were used as 9 an offload for staff members to vent about a young 10 person, often in derogatory terms.

11 LADY SMITH: That's a very important point, you have touched 12 on it already, Mr Watson, but if staff let themselves 13 think in derogatory terms and write in derogatory terms, 14 they are going to be a long way from ever establishing 15 a culture of respect for the children and understanding 16 why the children behaved in a way that is difficult to 17 deal with. Nobody's suggesting it is not, but if you, 18 from the beginning, are allowed to assume that it is 19 okay to be rude about the children, and regard them as 20 thorns in your flesh, you are never going to establish 21 a healthy culture that the children are going to be 22 properly protected in.

23 MR WATSON: Indeed, my Lady.

24 As I think I said on the last occasion, if that was 25 what they were writing down, goodness knows what they

1           were saying in person.

2   LADY SMITH:   Indeed, yes.

3   MR WATSON:   I will return to that, my Lady, in addressing

4           how the council has moved on.

5   LADY SMITH:   Mm-hm.

6   MR WATSON:   One aspect was that records tended to deal with

7           a number of children across the home rather than 8           maintaining individual records for individual children.

9           There was no understanding of their needs, the trauma

10          they may be going through, or why a child would be 11          upset. There was a lack of specificity and detail in 12          records. There were no occurrence sheets, perhaps to 13          hide further punishment, or other incidents. The tone

14          betrayed an attitude of disrespect and carelessness

15          towards the children for whom they ought to have been 16          caring.

17                Thirdly, and finally, recruitment and training.

18          There was little evidence of safe recruitment practices

19          or how staff were trained, equipped and kept up to date.

20          The Council has radically altered their approach in the 21          intervening years, as your Ladyship has heard, and they 22          accept that they failed to have appropriate measures in 23          place at that time.

24                Let me turn to addressing the identified failures.

25                My Lady, I will start with the most striking

1       example, the evidence from 'Jessica', regarding the 2       sexual abuse of another child by a staff member. Aside 3       from the steps that have been taken to prevent such 4       an incident occurring, if that were to be reported now 5       the allegation would trigger a joint police-social work 6       investigation.

7       Let me turn to safe recruitment. Staff are 8       appropriately vetted and will have appropriate 9       qualifications. In addition to qualifications and 10      experience, however, they also want the right attitude
11      and motivation. As Mr Purdie said:

12        'We are looking for people who are child centred.
13      We want people that can actually engage and form 14      a relationship with children and primarily someone who 15      likes children.'

16       They are ensuring that children and those with 17      experience within South Lanarkshire's care system are 18      involved in the interview process. There is a soft 19      interview, not scored, an informal conversation when 20      children in care have a conversation with the candidate 21      and share their views with the interview panel about who 22      their preferred candidate would be. Champions Board and 23      Promise workers employed by the council and who are care 24      experienced are involved in the interview process. They 25      provide their view of what is a child-centred worker.

1 LADY SMITH: I may have asked this at the time, forgive me
2 if I did and I have forgotten. The use of this word 3 'Champions', have you any idea what it emerged from and 4 why it was felt to be the right description?

5 MR WATSON: I can't say that I do, my Lady, and I am not 6 going to extemporise, but I can come back to your 7 Ladyship on that point after this.

8 LADY SMITH: It is not a hugely important point, but I have 9 wondered whether it is the right way to capture what is 10 good work, evidently, on the part of the council in its 11 involvement with children and young people.

12 MR WATSON: Yes, my Lady, and I will come back to your 13 Ladyship on that.

14 LADY SMITH: Thank you.

15 MR WATSON: My Lady, staffing ratios are now sufficient to 16 stop staff ever being alone with a child in a room.
17 There should always be two members of staff. This is 18 protective of children and supportive of staff. There 19 should always be a log, including a record of who 20 entered the room, and when, and why, and who was with 21 them. And that log is routinely checked.

22 That is coupled with offset shift patterns so that 23 there is not always the same two individuals on shift
24 together. That avoids conscious and subconscious
25 collusion between staff. It reduces the risk of undue

1 influence between experienced and inexperienced
2 practitioners.

3 That leads on to supervision. One-to-one 4 supervision takes place with an employee and their 5 supervisor to help maintain a culture where colleagues
6 comply with the protocols and can report non-compliance
7 of other staff. If an employee was uncomfortable about 8 a peer's practice, that should be an opportunity to 9 share it.

10 In addition, there are ongoing constant informal 11 opportunities for supervision. It can be a sense check 12 by the line manager or supervisor. They are trained to 13 be inquisitive about what took place on a shift.

14 The council has also provided the opportunity for 15 all staff to speak to a more senior member of staff 16 outwith their formal supervision arrangements. They are 17 encouraged to do so if there is anything they are 18 uncomfortable with. The council has implemented a duty 19 to report any concerns arising from a staff member's 20 care of children. This is now made clear in their 21 induction and in child protection training. It is their 22 duty to report concerns. There would be a consequence 23 for not raising a concern. This is viewed as a breach 24 of their contract, as well as a breach of that duty, and 25 would result in a fact-finding investigation. The 1           sanction of dismissal or management action is available.

2   LADY SMITH: The duty is actually written into the contract 3           of employment now, isn't it?

4   MR WATSON: It is, my Lady, yes.

5   LADY SMITH: Yes.

6   MR WATSON: In addition, after all that, if staff members 7           are not confident in sharing concerns, the council has 8           a confidential disclosure line which can also be 9           anonymous, similar to a whistleblowing structure. If 10          a confidential concern is raised, an investigation is 11          triggered. The council would always advocate 12          transparency and openness and wants a culture where 13          staff are comfortable and confident to report concerns 14          directly, but this adds an additional layer of support.
15          Where there are anonymous disclosures, the council will 16          then focus on establishing facts before considering how 17          to address it.

18          My Lady, I have already touched on record keeping 19          and that has been significantly overhauled. Mr Purdie 20          set out how they want to move to one file for each 21          child, held electronically, which will also have access 22          to their full electronic system, and is transparent for 23          all care providers. Any event relevant to that child, 24          including, in fact perhaps particularly, the positives 25          from their day can be added to that file. Aside from

1        assisting those providing care at that point, it will be 2        a much fuller record for the child in the future.

3            Staff are trained on appropriate language to use.
4        Residential staff can go directly onto the file and 5        record anything within that, including the child's 6        journey, not just negative behaviour. It should be more 7        like a daily diary.

8            Staff are now trained in trauma-informed approaches 9        to childcare. The council currently has a programme in 10       place which provides training on trauma-informed 11       practice which all staff and foster carers are expected 12       to complete. This involves training around recognising 13       the impact of trauma, how children respond and how to 14       respond appropriately when there are triggers that would 15       set off that trauma. There is external psychological 16       therapy available for staff. A psychologist provides 17       group and individual reflections for residential workers 18       and advice on how to cope with vicarious trauma when 19       dealing with young people. That psychologist also acts 20       as an external pair of eyes on how they support staff to 21       deal with young people and their trauma.

22            The council also now encourages social workers to 23        undertake announced and unannounced visits in all types
24        of accommodations. They must be clear about the purpose
25        of a visit. Just seeing a child in an interviewing area

1 is not appropriate. They should make sure that they 2 have a sense of the full care setting, and the 3 opportunity to speak to the child without them being 4 influenced by what is said by staff or other children.

5 Finally, my Lady, discipline and restraint. The 6 council has adopted the Therapeutic Crisis Intervention
7 approach to care, flowing from the 'Holding Safely' 8 report. They adopt promoting positive behaviour as 9 a strategy for working with children in care, viewing 10 restraint or physical contact as a last resort, working 11 on how to recognise triggers and use different 12 strategies. All residential workers are trained in that 13 framework. Any new staff are not allowed to be involved 14 in restraint or, indeed, any diversion activity before 15 completing the course. Where restraint does take place, 16 it requires a debrief and report. If a diversion 17 strategy is used, again a report is prepared to show why 18 a restraint was not needed.

19 My Lady, and more briefly, there are ongoing areas
20 for improvement. The council has recently published 21 a new social work management system and this will be 22 rolled out to all current children's homes registered in 23 the council area. This will enable all residential 24 staff to input directly to the child's file. This can 25 then be seen in real time remotely by the social worker

1 and relevant managers involved in the child's care plan.

2 In his evidence, Mr Purdie noted that there are 3 resource challenges, and that remains the case. It is 4 challenging to meet the goals of The Promise with 5 current levels of recruitment and resourcing. The 6 Council is engaging with the Independent Care Review, 7 but the biggest challenge at present is the recruitment 8 and retention of care workers, with many burning out 9 after a few years.

10 The council also knows there is more to do on 11 maximising the voice of the child. They are 12 investigating giving children the opportunity to request 13 a visit from an independent advocacy service, how that 14 would be accessed, who would provide it and how it would 15 dovetail with other care providers. They are also 16 looking at developing an app as an additional means of 17 children requesting the opportunity to speak to their 18 social worker.

19 The council is developing further external oversight 20 of the management of homes. An external manager should 21 have visibility within the children's houses and should 22 make a routine record of those visits in a more 23 systematic way. That should evidence their visibility, 24 and provide external eyes on the culture within a house.
25 They will meet the registered manager, varying meetings

1       between the home and council headquarters. They will 2       develop a relationship with staff and with children, so 3       that they can be a part of the call for raising 4       concerns, as well as observing care provision in action.

5       To provide an additional scrutiny of activity, South
6       Lanarkshire Council has also agreed that their child 7       protection committee should receive an annual report
8       from a relevant senior manager to report on activity 9       from complaints, investigations, inspections, advocacy
10      and significant events within children's houses across 11      South Lanarkshire. This will give additional scrutiny 12      and challenge in relation to and assist in ensuring safe
13      practice and standards for children across all South
14      Lanarkshire children's houses.

15      My Lady, South Lanarkshire Council wants to repeat 16      their apology to those children who suffered the abusive 17      regime in place at Calder House and it was an abusive 18      regime, unchecked by proper oversight, and the council 19      apologises for that.

20      As a result of this Inquiry, they have reflected on 21      how, as a council and as a profession, they have let 22      children down. The areas of improvement I have set out 23      will be implemented and reviewed on an ongoing basis.
24      The conclusions of this Inquiry will be shared across 25      the service. Any actions will be implemented in

1       an improvement plan. They will ensure that there is 2       elected member scrutiny of this through appropriate 3       council and social work committees.

4       The Chief Social Work Officer, who is here today,
5       has asked that I give this commitment from him 6       personally and on behalf of the council as a whole.

7   LADY SMITH: Thank you very much, Mr Watson.

8       I am very grateful for that, and also for the 9       details of where South Lanarkshire have now got to in 10      the improvement and development of their child 11      protection practices in particular, and overall their 12      services to children who have to be in residential care.

13      It does look as though they know that that work is 14      never done and that's good to hear.

15   MR WATSON: Yes, absolutely, my Lady.

16   LADY SMITH: Thank you.

17      Could I now move on to Mr Henry.

18      Mr Henry, I know you are here wearing a number of 19      hats, and no doubt the first you would like to cover is 20      the Archdiocese of Glasgow, is that right?

21      Closing submissions by Mr Henry on behalf of the 22                      Archdiocese of Glasgow

23   MR HENRY: It is indeed, my Lady, thank you.

24      My Lady, I do indeed appear on behalf of the Roman 25      Catholic Archdiocese of Glasgow. The archdiocese traces

1 its post-Reformation history to 1878 and the current 2 archbishop is the Most Reverend William Nolan, who was 3 installed as Archbishop of Glasgow on 26 February 2022.

4 The archdiocese accepts that harm was caused to 5 children, who are now adults, as a result of their time
6 in residential accommodation. The archdiocese
7 acknowledges the suffering, trauma and pain survivors 8 have experienced and their bravery in coming forward.
9 The archdiocese acknowledges that there will be others
10 who have suffered but have not come forward.

11 The archdiocese deeply regrets that abuse has taken 12 place and apologises for any failings on its part which 13 have in any way contributed to that abuse and the 14 archdiocese continues to seek ways to support survivors.

15 In Phase 8 the Inquiry heard evidence in relation to 16 a number of establishments, but of particular interest
17 to the archdiocese are St Mary's Kenmure, St Andrew's 18 Shandon, St John's Springboig, St Ninian's Gartmore, 19 St Mungo's Mauchline and the Good Shepherd Centre in 20 Bishopton.

21 Dealing first, my Lady, with St Mary's Kenmure. As 22 the Inquiry is aware, the school was placed under the 23 superintendence of the De La Salle Brothers in 1916, but 24 the property itself remained in the ownership of the 25 archdiocese. The archdiocese appointed some members of

1 the Board of Management, with others being appointed by 2 the Town Council of Glasgow. The Brother Superintendent 3 who was the headmaster of the school was appointed by 4 the Superior General of the Brothers, as were other 5 Brothers. Lay staff were appointed by the 6 superintendent, but the chaplain of the school was 7 appointed by the archbishop.

8 The Board of Management did include at times 9 representatives from other local authorities, and at 10 some point the board took on the employment of the staff 11 and the Brothers, though the archbishop appointed the 12 chaplain of the school. When the De La Salle Brothers 13 left the school in 1966, the board of the school 14 continued as it had done before, employing staff as 15 required.

16 The Board of Managers was responsible for the school 17 and employed the staff. The archbishop appointed the 18 board members. These board members appointed included 19 clergy from the archdiocese. The board members were 20 appointed to assume membership of the board and to 21 assume responsibility for the establishment. They 22 employed the staff at the school and governed it.

23 There is of course evidence before the Inquiry, both 24 in relation to the historical position at St Mary's 25 Kenmure and the current difficulties faced by the 1 school.

2 LADY SMITH: Yes.

3 MR HENRY: Throughout this time, the archdiocese appointed 4 board members and clergy from the archdiocese were at 5 times appointed as board members.

6 For St Andrew's Shandon, my Lady, the archdiocese 7 holds very little material in relation to that school, 8 which closed in 1986.

9 When the school opened in the mid-1960s, the 10 property was transferred to the trustees of the managers 11 of the school, before being transferred to the 12 headmaster of the school, again, my Lady, as was, 13 I think, previously identified presumably in his 14 official capacity rather than a personal transfer.

15 The school was run under the auspices of the church
16 and in particular the archdiocese. The archdiocese 17 nominated board members, as well as local authorities 18 nominating board members, and the archdiocese was 19 represented on the board, although it was led on 20 a day-to-day basis by the headmaster.

21 For St John's Springboig, the archdiocese appointed 22 the Board of Management of that school, the Board of 23 Management employed the staff of this school, including 24 the De La Salle Brothers. At least some of the time, 25 some local authorities nominated members of the board of 1 managers.

2 St Ninian's Gartmore was not within the geographical 3 Archdiocese of Glasgow. The archdiocese did, however, 4 own the school buildings and appointed the board of 5 management. The Board of Management was autonomous and 6 employed the staff, including the Brothers. The 7 Brothers operated the school on a day-to-day basis, and 8 one of them served as headmaster though the archdiocese 9 did provide resident chaplains to the institutions, at 10 least from 1946 to 1968.

11 Although there are no reports of chaplains after 12 1968, my Lady, it is likely that some chaplaincy service 13 was provided.

14 LADY SMITH: Mm-hm.

15 MR HENRY: The archdiocese has records of two priests 16 serving as chaplains of St Mungo's between 1942 and 17 1956.

18 My Lady, turning to the Good Shepherd Centre. In 19 the late 1940s the Good Shepherd Sisters began the 20 process of removing themselves from the east end of 21 Glasgow and moving to Bishopton in Renfrewshire.
22 Bishopton is currently located within the Diocese of 23 Paisley. However, my Lady, from 1878 until 1948, 24 Paisley was part of the Archdiocese of Glasgow, before 25 being established as a separate diocese in 1948.

1           In the early 1980s, the Sisters began the process of 2           removing themselves from Bishopton.

3           In April 1981, the then Archbishop of Glasgow,
4           Thomas Winning, wrote to the convent's solicitor, 5           indicating that the bishops were ready to undertake the 6           responsibility of running what was then the 7           St Euphrasia's Centre for a period of two years. The 8           responsible body became the Scottish Hierarchy of the 9           Church.

10          During this time, a Board of Management was 11          established and took responsibility for the governance 12          of the school. The archdiocese understands that the 13          structure of the board has been changed to a company 14          limited by guarantee and remains a charity.

15          With its location within the Diocese of Paisley, the 16          archdiocese understands that the responsibility for the 17          appointment of the board lies with the Bishop of 18          Paisley. While there was a period when, in terms of 19          articles of association, the archdiocese had some rights 20          in terms of appointments, it is understood that in 21          practice appointments were made by the Bishop of 22          Paisley. There have, however, been periods where clergy 23          from the archdiocese were members of the board.

24          Throughout the course of this phase of the Inquiry,
25          the Inquiry has heard evidence of abuse, including

1 evidence of physical, sexual and emotional abuse. There 2 is evidence of home leave being withdrawn as 3 a punishment. There is evidence of controlled drugs 4 being brought into St Mary's by staff. Regardless of 5 whether the day-to-day operations of schools were being 6 run by the De La Salle Brothers or lay staff, Boards of 7 Managers were responsible for managing the schools in 8 the interests of the welfare, development and 9 rehabilitation of the children. The archdiocese accepts 10 that through those board members, it ought to have been 11 aware of the way in which schools were being run, and 12 that it had the right to influence the way in which 13 those schools were being run.

14 The archdiocese accepts that whatever rules, 15 regulations, legislation, policies or procedures that 16 were in place, they failed to prevent the abuse 17 described by the survivors. The abuse described by the 18 survivors happened while Boards of Management were in 19 place. The archdiocese regrets this and apologises for 20 any failings on its part that may have contributed to 21 that abuse.

22 My Lady, as I indicated earlier, the Inquiry has 23 also heard evidence in relation to the current 24 difficulties faced by St Mary's Kenmure. The 25 archdiocese regrets that failings on its part may have

1 contributed to that situation which is faced by 2 St Mary's, and, most importantly, the children cared for 3 there, and the archdiocese again apologises for any 4 failings.

5 Throughout the course of this phase of the Inquiry,
6 the archdiocese did not seek to question survivors, it 7 does not seek in any way to challenge or minimise the 8 experience and evidence of the survivors of what 9 happened to them when they were children. The 10 archdiocese is committed to learning lessons through 11 this Inquiry.

12 My Lady, the archdiocese is a component of the 13 Bishop's Conference of Scotland's view of a one of all 14 church approach to safeguarding. The archdiocese has 15 been involved in the review of safeguardings at all 16 levels within the church in Scotland. This review led 17 to the development of a Scotland-wide safeguarding 18 manual, 'In God's Image'. This was reviewed and updated 19 after three years and is now on its second version, 20 which came into effect on 8 September 2021. The 21 archdiocese works within the safeguarding standards set 22 out in that document. Each diocese advises the Bishop's 23 Conference of Scotland of any changes in practice or 24 procedure in order that the safeguarding manual is kept 25 up to date and that all diocese are alerted to any

1 amendments.

2 As part of the archdiocese's adherence to 3 safeguarding, there is training for all, including 4 clergy, employees and volunteers within the church.
5 A fundamental part of that training is the church-wide 6 policy of mandatory reporting of abuse. If abuse is 7 seen, or there is a disclosure of abuse, whether that is 8 said to have occurred within church settings or 9 elsewhere, the diocesan safeguarding adviser is 10 informed.

11 The archdiocese follows the policy of mandatory 12 reporting, requiring all allegations of abuse to be 13 reported to police. The archdiocese is monitored by the 14 Scottish Catholic Safeguarding Standards Agency, which 15 is an independent body.

16 LADY SMITH: Yes.

17 MR HENRY: As outlined previously, my Lady, the archdiocese 18 accepts that harm was caused to children, who are now 19 adults, as a result of their time in residential 20 accommodation. It acknowledges the suffering that they 21 have experienced, and apologises for the failings on its 22 part which have contributed to that suffering.

23 LADY SMITH: Thank you.

24 Where do you want to go next, Mr Henry?

25 MR HENRY: My Lady, I understand I was simply taking the

1           order that was in front of me, my Lady. I would move to 2           St Philip's, unless your Ladyship wishes otherwise.

3   LADY SMITH: Thank you very much, yes, thank you.

4           Closing submissions by Mr Henry on behalf of 5                               St Philip's School

6   MR HENRY: My Lady, I appear on behalf of St Philip's
7           School, which is located within Plains in North 8           Lanarkshire.

9           It was initially created as an approved school, 10          opening in 1970. It is a specialised educational and 11          residential centre, that primarily serves children and 12          young people with additional support needs.

13          The school is a Catholic independent school, 14          providing care and education in the residential setting.
15          It is part of the residential school sector in Scotland, 16          offering both residential care and day placements for 17          its pupils. The school typically caters to pupils with 18          social, emotional and behavioural difficulties, as well 19          as those with other complex needs. The school supports 20          those who may have experienced significant trauma, 21          attachment disorders or other psychological and 22          emotional challenges, and who may require specialised 23          support that mainstream schools cannot provide.

24          The school also takes in pupils with learning 25          difficulties, autism spectrum disorders, and other

1 additional support needs that require a tailored 2 educational approach.

3 My Lady, following the closure of a secure unit at 4 St Philip's in 2011, the school moved from the then main 5 campus and relocated to within that secure unit 6 building. Following a programme of environmental 7 upgrade and development, the former secure unit was 8 decommissioned and registered as a school care
9 accommodation service. Although the school is now 10 a company limited by guarantee, it is managed by 11 an independent charitable organisation. A Board of 12 Directors oversees the school's operation. The 13 management structure of the school includes a director 14 of services, who is responsible for the day-to-day 15 running of the school. The director is supported by 16 a team of senior staff, which include a deputy director, 17 senior service managers, residential care managers, 18 assistant managers and specialised teachers.

19 The operation of the school is focused on providing 20 a safe and nurturing environment that promotes both 21 educational and personal development. The management 22 aims to ensure that all staff members are trained to 23 handle the specific needs of pupils, including 24 therapeutic support, specialised teaching strategies and 25 behavioural intervention.

1           St Philip's School notes that the definition of 2           'abuse' is wide ranging and can manifest itself in many 3           forms. It acknowledges that abuse took place within the 4           school. The school recognises the bravery of the 5           survivors who have given evidence to the Inquiry, but it 6           recognises that there will be others who have not yet 7           come forward.

8           The school apologises for the abuse suffered by 9           children, and the pain and suffering that this has 10          caused. The school did not seek to question or 11          challenge the evidence of the survivors in any way, and 12          the school considers that it is for your Ladyship to 13          make any findings in fact that she sees fit.

14          My Lady, the evidence which was led relating to 15          St Philip's School prior to 1990 is of a school which 16          was far different to the one which emerged from that 17          time and beyond. The Inquiry heard evidence from 18          Mr Patrick Hanrahan, who was headmaster of the school
19          from 1990 to 2009, and Mr Brian Harold, who was a depute 20          head of the school from 1989 until he replaced 21          Mr Hanrahan as headmaster. Mr Hanrahan's evidence was 22          that his initial impression of the school was not good, 23          that in the main there were good people trying do their 24          best in sometimes very difficult circumstances, and that 25          people were open to change, wanted to learn, but needed

1 a lot of guidance.

2 Mr Hanrahan's evidence was that the leadership team 3 at the school prior to his recruitment was 4 unsatisfactory. He also stated that some of the older 5 staff members employed by the school had what he termed 6 outdated practices and skills.

7 Mr Harold gave evidence that he viewed Mr Hanrahan's
8 arrival as the catalyst for change. Mr Harold discussed 9 working together with Mr Hanrahan and, indeed, the wider 10 management team to better the culture within the school, 11 and to try and improve the standards and quality of 12 care, whilst providing children with a voice so they 13 could be heard and listened to.

14 It is submitted that the arrival of Mr Harold and 15 Mr Hanrahan was indeed a positive move for all involved
16 at St Philip's, including the children in its care.
17 Whilst prior to Mr Harold's arrival there was what would 18 be described as a fairly basic system, where children 19 were dealt with by staff as best they could, and, 20 indeed, if things got out of hand the children would be 21 restrained, Mr Hanrahan's position was that the policies 22 and practices relating to the restraint of children were 23 routinely being monitored and reviewed as part of 24 a wider process to change the school for the better.

25 Survivors from St Philip's gave evidence of home

1       leave being taken away from them as a form of 2       punishment. The school accepts that the use of the 3       removal of home leave as a form of punishment was 4       inappropriate and unacceptable. It apologises for all 5       instances in which it was used as such.

6       St Philip's School is dedicated to continually 7       learning and improving its services for and care given 8       to children who enter the school. It is guided by 9       current legislation and guidance, including the 10      incorporation of the UN Convention on the Rights of the 11      Child, the Independent Care Review from 2020 and the 12      recommendations set out in The Promise. In line with 13      this, structures are in place to allow children's voices 14      to be heard and they are encouraged to participate in 15      decision making concerning their care.

16      There is now a strengthened independent oversight of 17      residential care which increases accountability.
18      St Philip's is subject to inspection by the Care 19      Inspectorate and Education Scotland. Child safeguarding 20      and the upholding of children's rights is a key focus of 21      all inspections.

22      The local authorities, who place children into 23      St Philip's, carry out regular monitoring visits and 24      request updates from the school. In addition,
25      Police Scotland carry out a monthly monitoring meeting

1 to support the care of children.

2 St Philip's School considers that properly trained
3 and qualified staff are key to any safe and effective 4 system of work and care. All staff are provided with 5 training and the school's learning and development
6 service ensure that staff receive child protection 7 training. The school has identified safeguarding leads 8 across the organisation to ensure that children are 9 protected and consistently supported by staff.

10 St Philip's now has its own human resources
11 department, which ensures that the recruitment of staff 12 adheres to the safer staff recruitment policy and the 13 PVG scheme. Within the school, practice development 14 meetings take place on a monthly basis, or more 15 frequently if required. These meeting have a focus on 16 safeguarding and are attended by identified safeguarding 17 leads, as well as a range of staff from across the 18 organisation.

19 Children in St Philip's, as well as staff members, 20 can access psychological service support and, through 21 a partnership with the NHS, have access to services 22 including mental health support and counselling. These 23 services are part of attempts to foster a culture at the 24 school, which prioritises children's rights and 25 well-being. This has led to the school gaining

1           the Nurture Schools Award, it has been awarded 2           Employment Charter from North Lanarkshire Council and 3           all staff members complete Therapeutic Crisis 4           Intervention 7 training and trauma-informed practices to 5           support young people.

6   LADY SMITH:   Who awards the Nurture Schools Award, Mr Henry, 7           do you know?

8   MR HENRY:    If your Ladyship would allow me one moment.

9   LADY SMITH:   Thank you.

10           (Pause)

11   MR HENRY:   My Lady, I certainly don't have that information 12           to hand, unfortunately.

13   LADY SMITH:   Well, you can let me know when you find out,
14           thank you.

15   MR HENRY:   Indeed, my Lady.

16           My Lady, as I indicated, the Therapeutic Crisis 17           Intervention 7 training and trauma-informed practice is 18           offered to all staff members, to allow them to support 19           young people to manage their emotions in a therapeutic 20           way and the staff receive refresher training on this on 21           a six monthly basis.

22           My Lady, these changes have not been set out to 23           create an impression that St Philip's is in its current 24           guise perfect or that new and better ideas and practices 25           will not emerge. The school considers that lessons can

1       always be learned and practices always improved. It is 2       hoped that by listening to the most important voices at 3       the school, those of the children, that the school can 4       continue on its path of improvement and provide children
5       with the level of care that they deserve.

6   LADY SMITH: Thank you very much.

7       I am just wondering, Mr Henry, whether I should 8       break now and you can pick up with St Mary's Kenmure and 9       the Good Shepherd at 2 o'clock.

10   MR HENRY: Certainly.

11   LADY SMITH: Rather than have you rush through St Mary's, 12       because there are some significant things, obviously, 13       you will want to say about St Mary's in particular.

14   MR HENRY: Indeed, my Lady.

15   LADY SMITH: I will stop now for the lunch break and sit 16       again at 2 o'clock.

17       Thank you.

18   (12.55 pm)

19                   (The luncheon adjournment)

20   (2.00 pm)

21   LADY SMITH: Welcome back.

22       Mr Henry, I think we were about to go to St Mary's, 23       is that correct?

1 Closing submissions by Mr Henry on behalf of

2 St Mary's Kenmure

3 MR HENRY: It is, my Lady, thank you.

4 My Lady, I appear on behalf of St Mary's Kenmure.

5 My Lady, St Mary's Kenmure accepts that survivors
6 who were children were harmed as a result of their time 7 at the school and it apologises for those failings which 8 contributed to that pain and suffering.

9 My Lady, St Mary's Kenmure is located in 10 Bishopbriggs, East Dunbartonshire. While it can trace 11 its roots back to the east end of Glasgow in the mid 12 19th century, in or around 1905 the school moved to the 13 Kenmure Estate in Bishopbriggs.

14 In 1916, following a minute of agreement between the 15 Chairman of the Directors of the Catholic Industrial 16 School of Glasgow and the Superior General of the 17 De La Salle Brothers, the school was placed under the 18 superintendence of the Brothers.

19 The De La Salle Brothers provided key employees, 20 and, with other staff, ran the school until they left in 21 1966. Following the Brothers' departure, the Board of 22 Management governed the school and employed staff.

23 In the mid 1970s, a secure unit known as the Ogilvie 24 Wing was opened on the site. A new secure unit was 25 subsequently built on the site, opening in June 2000.

1       It was registered for 36 beds, plus one emergency bed.
2       At the time, St Mary's Kenmure provided six open places
3       and 30 secure places.

4           Prior to the opening of the new secure unit, the 5       Archdiocese of Glasgow sold the site to the Cora 6       Foundation. The board of management continued as before 7       and when the new building opened and the children on the 8       site had moved into the new secure unit, the predecessor 9       buildings were either demolished or to be demolished.
10       The secure unit, or the former secure unit, is now the 11       only building on the site.

12           While St Mary's Kenmure is a company limited by 13       guarantee, it is managed by an independent charitable 14       organisation. A Board of Directors oversees the 15       operations, and a head of services is responsible for 16       the day-to-day running of the school. The company is 17       the registered provider of services to young people and 18       is registered with the Care Inspectorate and the 19       Registrar of Independent Schools. It is approved by the 20       Scottish Ministers to provide secure accommodation
21       services.

22           The objects of the charity are to provide secure 23       care and education for young people who are experiencing 24       social, emotional and behavioural difficulties. The 25       charity aims to meet its objective by the operation of 1 a secure unit with a view to effecting the mental,

2 physical and moral welfare of the young people within 3 the school and, as far as possible, to encourage them to 4 take their place as responsible citizens of the 5 community.

6 The charity further aims to promote the provision of 7 additional childcare and educational facilities to 8 disseminate experiences, information and treatments.

9 The school appreciates that the definition of abuse
10 is wide ranging and can manifest itself in many forms.
11 St Mary's Kenmure acknowledges that the abuse of 12 children took place within the school. It is accepted 13 that inappropriate or excessive use of restraint is 14 abuse and the Inquiry has also heard evidence of 15 physical, emotional and sexual abuse. St Mary's Kenmure 16 apologises for all instances of such abuse that took 17 place within the school, whenever they took place.

18 St Mary's Kenmure regrets that the health and 19 well-being of children were harmed by controlled drugs 20 being brought into the school by staff members and the 21 removal of home leave as a form of punishment was, and 22 remains, unacceptable. St Mary's Kenmure apologises for 23 all instances in which it was used as such.

24 The Inquiry, of course, did not only hear evidence 25 about the school's past. The present day was also

1 a focus. Following a Care Inspectorate inspection in 2 September and October of last year, a number of damning 3 findings were made. These included environmental 4 safety, child protection and safeguarding being 5 consistently compromised, meaning children were not 6 being cared for safely. Children being subject to or 7 witnessing high levels of physical restraint, which was 8 often disproportionate to the level of risk presented.

9 LADY SMITH: Yes, you make an important point there that 10 came out in the evidence, that it is not just being the 11 person subjected to restraint that can be distressing, 12 but seeing a restraint can distress other young people.

13 MR HENRY: Indeed, my Lady.

14 There was also an absence of effective recording and 15 reporting around risk management, leading to a high risk 16 of very poor outcomes, and what was described as 17 dangerously low staffing levels.

18 An improvement notice was served on the school and 19 emergency conditions imposed. The improvement notice 20 required the school to:

21 (1) ensure that the environment provides maximum 22 security of safe care to children and staff.

23 (2) ensure that an appropriate number of staff were 24 on duty, ensuring the right balance of qualification and 25 experience.

1           (3) ensure that effective safeguarding procedures
2 relating to child and adult protection are in place and 3 being followed.

4           (4) ensure that the admissions procedure is 5 effective to keep young people safe.

6           (5) ensure that there is effective recording, 7 oversight and analysis of incidents, including 8 restrictive practices.

9           (6) to protect the safety of those who use the 10 service.

11           The school was ordered to stop taking new admissions 12 and a limit was placed on the number of children who 13 could be placed within the school.

14           As the Inquiry has been advised, St Mary's Kenmure 15 accepted all of the Care Inspectorate's findings. The 16 school has been cooperating with the Care Inspectorate 17 to address the serious issues identified.

18           When submissions were made on St Mary's behalf at 19 the close of Chapter 11 of this phase in late December 20 last year, the Inquiry was advised that the Care
21 Inspectorate had been in the school that very week.

22           Following that visit by the Care Inspectorate, 23 St Mary's was notified that the requirements relating to 24 child protection, staffing and the security of the 25 environment had been met, with other requirements on

1 track to be met.

2 The Care Inspectorate have ended their regular site 3 visits to St Mary's Kenmure. The current schedule is 4 for visits every six weeks. St Mary's roll is currently 5 capped at a maximum of 12 children and this is to be 6 reviewed again on or after 10 March 2025.

7 As I indicated, St Mary's Kenmure accepts all of the 8 Care Inspectorate's findings and -- as hopefully can be 9 seen from the update provided -- is working with the 10 Inspectorate. As the Inquiry has identified, the more 11 powerful the lens that can be used to examine St Mary's 12 Kenmure, the better. St Mary's Kenmure has made 13 improvements to its governance of practice within the 14 school. The board receives regular updates on the 15 progress with the requirements imposed by the Care
16 Inspectorate, and also receive regular updates on child 17 protection issues and restraint activity within the 18 school, which is reflective of improved governance at 19 service level.

20 St Mary's Kenmure regrets and apologises for the 21 deterioration within the school. It is unacceptable
22 that matters reached the stage that they had. St Mary's 23 Kenmure apologises to the children who have been 24 impacted by these events.

25 St Mary's Kenmure understands that the restrictions

1 placed on it places the secure care sector in Scotland
2 at greater risk of being unable to provide a service
3 that meets demand. The measures imposed by the Care
4 Inspectorate have had a significant impact on St Mary's 5 finances, this has come at a time when the formerly new 6 secure unit is reaching the end of its intended 7 lifespan.

8 The Inquiry has heard evidence in relation to 9 St Mary's Kenmure from decades past up to the present 10 day. St Mary's Kenmure did not seek to question the 11 evidence of the survivors. It again apologises for all 12 instances of abuse that occurred within the school. It 13 accepts that harm was caused to children as a result of 14 their time in residential accommodation. It 15 acknowledges the suffering of survivors and their 16 bravery in coming forward. It apologises for the 17 failings which contributed to their pain and suffering 18 and St Mary's Kenmure remains grateful for the 19 opportunity to participate in the Inquiry's proceedings.

20 LADY SMITH: Yes. I am sure you don't mean to give that 21 impression, but we should probably confirm, Mr Henry, 22 where in paragraph 15 you are talking about the risk to 23 the whole sector if a school such as St Mary's has a cap
24 put on its numbers and numbers are restricted, then you 25 talk about the significant impact on St Mary's finances,

1       which I think you are saying compounds the problem, but 2       can I just have you spell out, you are not saying that 3       the Care Inspectorate should hold back from criticising 4       if its requirements are going to cost money to the 5       organisation?

6   MR HENRY: Absolutely not, my Lady, and that certainly 7       wasn't my intention. I apologise if that's the 8       impression that it caused.

9   LADY SMITH: There's no need to apologise, I think in 10       fairness to St Mary's I need to have that spelt out and 11       sometimes a voluntary organisation may just have to take 12       it on the chin if they are not up to standard, and not 13       only are they going to have less than they are allowed 14       to do, but that means their income will drop.

15   MR HENRY: Indeed, my Lady.

16   LADY SMITH: Thank you.

17       Now.

18   MR HENRY: That leaves me finally with the Good Shepherd 19       Sisters.

20       Closing submissions by Mr Henry on behalf of 21       the Good Shepherd Sisters

22   MR HENRY: My Lady, I again appear on behalf of the 23       Congregation of Our Lady of Charity of the Good 24       Shepherd, who for brevity's sake I will refer to as the 25       Good Shepherd Sisters.

1 LADY SMITH: Yes.

2 MR HENRY: They were formed following the amalgamation of 3 the Order of Our Lady of Charity and the Order of Our 4 Lady of Charity of the Good Shepherd, which was formed 5 by Sister Mary Euphrasia Pelletier in 1835, in France.

6 The two congregations shared a common origin, that 7 of the Order of Our Lady of Charity, which was also 8 formed in France in 1641. The Order had the stated goal 9 of caring for girls and women.

10 In 1825, Sister Mary Euphrasia was appointed 11 Superior of the Community of the Order in Tours, France.

12 In 1829, she was asked by the Bishop of Angers to 13 set up a home for girls and women there. That home 14 opened in 1829 and was called the Good Shepherd, in 15 memory of another house with a similar ministry which 16 had existed in the previous century.

17 The Generalate was approved in 1935, and with this 18 approval, the church established a congregation distinct 19 from the Order of Our Lady of Charity. The Order have 20 cared for children since their beginning in France.

21 The Good Shepherd Sisters is an international 22 apostolic religious institute of pontifical right. It 23 is not subject to the diocesan hierarchy for its 24 internal workings, but is committed to working with the 25 authority of the hierarchy according to its norms. The

1 Order has its own Superior General and a General Chapter 2 that meets every six years. The Provincial Superior in 3 the United Kingdom is Sister Anne-Josephine Carr.

4 The Good Shepherd Sisters' interest in this phase of 5 the Inquiry's work relates to Dalbeth School and 6 St Euphrasia's Training Centre in Bishopton, 7 Renfrewshire.

8 At the outset of these submissions, the Good
9 Shepherd Sisters wish to make clear that they apologise 10 to all those who suffered abuse at Dalbeth School and 11 St Euphrasia's. The Sisters did not seek to question, 12 challenge or minimise the evidence of survivors who gave 13 evidence before the Inquiry. It is accepted that there 14 will be others who have suffered who have not yet come 15 forward. The Good Shepherd Sisters have the greatest 16 sympathy for all survivors who have suffered and for all 17 those who were let down by the care system.

18 As was outlined in the closing submissions in 19 Chapter 11, my Lady, the Good Shepherd Sisters moved to 20 Bishopton after having left Dalbeth, Glasgow, where 21 Dalbeth Girls' School operated as an approved school.

22 St Euphrasia's Training Centre was opened in the 23 summer of 1948, with Dalbeth Girls' School opening in 24 1953.

25 The St Euphrasia's Centre was formed in 1971

1 following a merger of these two institutions.

2 St Euphrasia's Centre was an independent residential 3 establishment governed by a voluntary Board of Managers, 4 the responsible parent body being the Sisters of the 5 Good Shepherd.

6 By the 1980s, the Sisters had appreciated that they 7 were not going to be able to staff St Euphrasia's Centre
8 indefinitely. Following discussions with the Catholic 9 Hierarchy in Scotland, it was decided that the centre
10 would be handed to the Hierarchy.

11 In 1981, the Hierarchy took on responsibility for 12 the centre, which continued to be governed by 13 a voluntary Board of Managers.

14 In 1995, the property was sold to the Cora 15 Foundation, and on 1 April 1996, the last of the Sisters
16 left Bishopton.

17 My Lady, the Sisters acknowledge that the definition 18 of abuse is wide ranging and manifests itself in many 19 forms. It is accepted that abuse took place in Dalbeth, 20 St Euphrasia's and the St Euphrasia's Centre. Survivors 21 have given evidence of physical, emotional and sexual 22 abuse. There is evidence before the Inquiry of the use 23 of a punishment or detention room and of children being 24 punished for bedwetting. The Inquiry has also heard 25 evidence from survivors of the use of corporal

1 punishment.

2 It was a fundamental tenet of the Good Shepherd
3 Sisters that they were never to strike children. This 4 followed an instruction from Sister Mary Euphrasia that 5 children were not to be struck nor harsh measures used.
6 Sister Mary Euphrasia directed that the order was to 7 stand forever and always as though it were inscribed and 8 printed everywhere. The order applied regardless of 9 whether corporal punishment was permitted by the law or 10 statutory regulations which applied within any 11 jurisdiction within which the Sisters were operating.

12 As your Ladyship previously identified, perhaps the 13 order ought to have been inscribed and printed 14 everywhere. While it may have been considered 15 enlightened for its time when corporal punishment was 16 still permitted in Scotland, the Sisters accept that 17 people do not always adhere to the high standards
18 expected of them and a policy can only be as effective 19 as those administering it.

20 The Good Shepherd Sisters accept that despite the 21 clear and direct instruction that children were not to 22 be struck, corporal punishment was used and the Sisters 23 apologise for this.

24 The Inquiry has also heard evidence of children, 25 including children as young as 11, being put to work in

1           a laundry. That was an extensive commercial operation, 2           children were put to work on 12-hour shifts.

3   LADY SMITH: In silence.

4   MR HENRY: In silence, my Lady.

5           The dangerous and unpaid work was, of course, not 6           suitable for children.

7           My Lady, the Good Shepherd Sisters have not been 8           able to identify whose decision it was that there should 9           be such a commercial operation carrying out laundry work 10          in Bishopton, but laundries were a long-established part 11          of the Good Shepherd Sisters' work. It is accepted that 12          children should not have been exposed to the dangers 13          involved in working in a commercial laundry. It was, of 14          course, inappropriate and unacceptable.

15          The Inquiry also heard evidence of children being 16          used to clean the buildings in Bishopton. This included 17          the use of bumpers. While children should not have been 18          used to clean buildings at all, the use of these heavy 19          devices was particularly inappropriate, and the Good 20          Shepherd Sisters apologise to all those who were made to 21          work in this way.

22          The combination of laundry and cleaning work meant 23          that, as was outlined in evidence, some children did not 24          receive any education. Others received inadequate 25          education. The Good Shepherd Sisters apologise for 1       this.

2           The Good Shepherd Sisters are, however, my Lady, no
3       longer involved with the provision of residential 4       accommodation for children in Scotland. There are only 5       a small number of Sisters remaining in Scotland. The 6       Sisters accept that harm was caused to children who are 7       now adults as a result of their time spent in 8       residential accommodation.

9           The Sisters acknowledge the suffering, trauma and 10      pain that the survivors have experienced and the bravery 11      in coming forward. They apologise to all those who have 12      suffered harm as a result of their time spent in the 13      care of the Sisters.

14          The Sisters deeply regret the harm that was suffered 15      by young women and children who were placed within their 16      care in Bishopton. The Good Shepherd Sisters welcome
17      this Inquiry and appreciate it is important for all 18      voices to be heard. The Sisters regret that survivors 19      have painful memories of their time spent in care. They 20      are grateful to the Inquiry for the opportunity to 21      participate in its work, and remain committed to 22      assisting the Inquiry in any way that they can.

23   LADY SMITH: Thank you very much, Mr Henry.

24          I would now like to turn to Renfrewshire Council and 25      Mr Young, I think you are here for Renfrewshire, is that

1 right?

2 Closing submissions by Mr Young on behalf of 3 Renfrewshire Council

4 MR YOUNG: Yes, my Lady, good afternoon.

5 I am here representing Renfrewshire Council. Your 6 Ladyship has the written submission, which is extremely 7 brief, on behalf of the council. I don't really intend 8 to elaborate much on what is there.

9 That is largely because Renfrewshire's interest in 10 this phase of the Inquiry's business was in relation to 11 Newfield Assessment Centre, subsequently known as 12 Rowanlea, which was dealt with in Chapter 10, only 13 a matter of a few months ago.

14 LADY SMITH: Yes.

15 MR YOUNG: A lengthy, or more lengthy, submission was given 16 by the council after that, which sets out, really, any 17 findings or any themes that the council would suggest 18 your Ladyship may take from that particular part of the 19 business.

20 All I suppose I would wish to highlight from that 21 submission at this point, my Lady, would be just to 22 reiterate that Renfrewshire Council does not seek to 23 dispute any of the accounts or evidence given out by the 24 applicants in relation to their experiences at Newfield.
25 It has accepted and does accept that abuse happened at 1 Newfield. It also accepts that there were failings on 2 Renfrewshire Council's part in relation to retention of 3 records regarding Newfield and also some of the record

4 keeping that took place from those records that we do 5 have.

6 It apologises again for the abuse that happened on 7 the part of its predecessor organisation and for the 8 failings that are attributable to Renfrewshire Council 9 itself.

10 I would simply wish to add, my Lady, on behalf of 11 the council, that it wants to take this opportunity to 12 express its wider gratitude to applicants that were 13 heard as part of all of the other chapters which will 14 feed into your Ladyship's findings as part of this 15 phase, and it looks forward to seeing those findings and 16 reflecting on them in due course.

17 LADY SMITH: Yes.

18 One thing I would be interested in your response to,
19 Mr Young, is the whole notion of an assessment centre.
20 It appears to emerge from the evidence that there was 21 a problem across the board with all the assessment 22 centres, that they weren't actually assessing children
23 at all and in some cases children remained there for far 24 too long, on the basis, it seemed, that nobody was able 25 to think of what to do with them next.

1 MR YOUNG: Yes.

2 LADY SMITH: Is that accepted?

3 MR YOUNG: Yes, I think that would be accepted by 4 Renfrewshire. I think this council's feeling on that

5 front might be put short as the idea of assessment

6 centres, while on the face of it, perhaps, maybe one

7 might say instinctively attractive, it really was

8 a flawed idea, but it was also a flawed idea that really

9 wasn't put into practice in any way, and the culture of 10 the previous detention centres really carried across, so

11 that what little assessment maybe took place was against

12 a backdrop of, really, a more disciplinarian environment

13 than would be in any way suitable for a proper

14 assessment of a child's needs.

15 LADY SMITH: Mm-hm.

16 Of course, I haven't heard directly from any sheriff

17 or any Children's Panel member at the time, but it seems

18 I may be able to infer that they genuinely thought that 19 they were sending children to be assessed, and for it to 20 be responsibly and professionally worked out what was 21 the best next step for the child.

22 MR YOUNG: I believe they did, my Lady. I don't think it

23 would be correct to say that there was absolutely no

24 assessment done --

25 LADY SMITH: No.

1 MR YOUNG: -- but what assessment was done, as I say, was on 2 a flawed basis.

3 LADY SMITH: Yes.

4 MR YOUNG: Mr Trainer, the Renfrewshire Council's Chief
5 Social Work Officer, when he gave his evidence, 6 I recall, said that really the idea that you take 7 a child out of their environment to assess what they 8 need in order to work within that environment is really 9 fundamentally flawed. When you think about it in those 10 terms perhaps, it is obvious that it is flawed.

11 LADY SMITH: Yes. Thank you very much for that.

12 MR YOUNG: Thank you, my Lady.

13 LADY SMITH: Thank you, Mr Young.

14 Then lastly for today, welcome Mr Pugh, you are here
15 for Glasgow City Council, I think, yes?

16 Closing submissions by Mr Pugh on behalf of Glasgow City 17 Council.

18 MR PUGH: Yes, thank you, my Lady.

19 My Lady, it is not the first time that this Inquiry 20 has heard about the benefit of sunlight as the best form
21 of disinfectant and this phase of the Inquiry's 22 important work has shown again the truth of that 23 statement.

24 Your Ladyship has the council's written submissions, 25 and, as I have done in the past, I don't intend simply

1 to read out all of those. Instead I am only going to go
2 through some of the more important, as I see it,
3 paragraphs and I will direct your Ladyship by paragraph 4 number.

5 LADY SMITH: Thank you.

6 MR PUGH: Starting with paragraph 3, my Lady, at the 7 commencement of this phase, and following the conclusion
8 of each of the chapters, the council has acknowledged 9 that abuse took place within each of the institutions it 10 ran, or were ran by its predecessors, and offered 11 an apology to the children and young people who 12 experienced abuse.

13 It is only proper, my Lady, that following the 14 conclusion of this phase of the evidence, and during 15 a time of reflection for the council, that apology is 16 once again reiterated to the children and young people 17 who were abused within residential care establishments 18 run by Glasgow City Council and its predecessors. The 19 council is deeply sorry.

20 Moving on to paragraph 8, my Lady, this phase of the 21 Inquiry has again been challenging for the council. The 22 evidence heard in relation to residential care services 23 from the 1960s through to the 2000s has testified to 24 abuse of the most serious kind, and over an extended 25 timeframe.

1           There is no doubt that such abuse was systemic. In 2           particular, the institutions of Larchgrove and Kerelaw 3           were subject to independent review and concerns were 4           raised but not acted upon.

5           As such, a culture was created whereby abuse was 6           accepted, and commonplace. Indeed, my Lady, the mere 7           number of abusers that were discovered at Kerelaw in 8           particular would tend to support that the abuse was 9           systemic at that school.

10          Of the institutions investigated, the council has by 11          far the greatest knowledge in relation to Kerelaw.
12          A number of members of the senior leadership team that 13          have been involved in this Inquiry have personal 14          recollections of the closure of that institution, and 15          the investigations and learning that followed.

16          The level of abuse at Kerelaw -- I distinctly recall 17          your Ladyship raising this point with me when we closed 18          the Kerelaw phase -- in terms of both its quantity and 19          severity is frankly astonishing. It will be of 20          significant concern to the Inquiry, as it is to the 21          council, that it was allowed to continue for so long and 22          at such a level. The criminal proceedings to date 23          demonstrate the scale of the problem, and must be one of 24          the worst instances of such conduct to have come before
25          this Inquiry.

1           The closure of Kerelaw School is considered by the 2           council to have been a significant turning point in its 3           progression and development of modern residential care
4           services.

5           Other institutions where applicant evidence was led 6           within this chapter; Larchgrove, Beechwood and 7           Cardross Park, are less familiar to the current 8           management of the council. In relation to Larchgrove, 9           it wasn't until this Inquiry was underway that the 10          Bennett and Righton report became known to the current 11          management of the council, albeit that there is no 12          dispute as to its contents and that it was available to 13          the council at the point that it was commissioned.

14   LADY SMITH: Yes.

15   MR PUGH: The council accepts that there are echoes of the 16          situation at Larchgrove that were magnified and 17          exacerbated by the time one looks at Kerelaw, indicating 18          that the lessons available were not learned.

19          Beechwood and Cardross Park were even less familiar, 20          having been largely, or wholly, governed by predecessor 21          councils and inherited by Glasgow following local 22          government restructuring. The council has tried to 23          assist as best it can with the Inquiry's investigations 24          in relation to those institutions, despite limited 25          physical records.

1           Applicant evidence of experience at those 2           institutions presented a mixed picture. Where there was 3           evidence of positive experiences within residential 4           care, in Beechwood in particular, there was also 5           evidence of abuse, and the nature of that abuse was 6           varied.

7           Practices which were commonplace in wider society at 8           the time can now be recognised as wholly inappropriate, 9           particularly in relation to methods utilised in order to 10          attempt to manage children and young people exhibiting 11          challenging behaviours. As we explain below, my Lady, 12          the council's approach to nurturing children and young 13          people in its care has developed, thankfully, 14          significantly.

15          My Lady, the council does not seek to excuse or to 16          minimise the criminal conduct that occurred at Kerelaw 17          and these other institutions, but within these 18          submissions we will now seek to highlight that the 19          current residential care provision is unrecognisable in 20          comparison.

21          With that, my Lady, if I can turn then to 22          paragraph 15 in the key themes, these are the key themes 23          that we have identified at the close of each of these 24          phases, and where we have indicated that we would 25          provide further information.

1 LADY SMITH: Yes.

2 MR PUGH: Starting with restraint, my Lady. The Inquiry has 3 heard significant applicant evidence of restraint 4 practices which were both unnecessary and abusive. The 5 evidence from Kerelaw in particular demonstrates that 6 inappropriate restraint was commonplace.

7 Training in how to intervene physically in 8 potentially harmful situations was not an initial 9 requirement for staff working at either Larchgrove or 10 Kerelaw. I think the same can probably be said of 11 Cardross Park as well, although we weren't able to find 12 any specific evidence in relation to that. It may be 13 that the Inquiry has it and we have just missed it, my 14 Lady, but I think the same can certainly be accepted in 15 relation to Cardross Park.

16 Your Ladyship might recall at least one member of 17 staff from Kerelaw describing receiving some training in 18 pain techniques as an aspect of restraint.

19 LADY SMITH: Yes.

20 MR PUGH: There was perhaps a sense, my Lady, that in the 21 early days restraint was no more than a shadow for 22 physical chastisement or other abuse, rather than what 23 we would now understand as being restraint.

24 LADY SMITH: Yes.

25 MR PUGH: Not that that minimises it in any way.

1           Many witnesses described Therapeutic Crisis
2           Intervention (TCI) training, the programme that was 3           introduced by the council in the 1990s. That was 4           a feature particularly in relation to both Kerelaw and 5           Cardross Park.

6           The model appeared to endorse de-escalation prior to 7           any physical intervention, but the Inquiry heard clear 8           evidence from both applicants and former staff members 9           that TCI was not uniformly adhered to. Indeed -- and 10          this is important, my Lady -- there was a sense from the 11          evidence that staff sometimes appeared to view the 12          training as an increased warrant to restrain, 13          effectively bypassing the de-escalation stage. Training 14          was sporadic and inconsistent and abusers utilised 15          opportunities to restrain in order, it seemed, to 16          perpetrate physical abuse on residents.

17          The culture of residential institutions was such 18          that children exhibiting challenging behaviours were 19          simply restrained and labelled as problematic, rather 20          than any attempt being made to understand their unique 21          and complex needs.

22          It is the council's position and, indeed, that of 23          Ms Millar in her evidence that there will always be 24          a requirement for local authorities to have procedures 25          in place which are utilised if a child or young person

1 places themselves, or others, at physical risk of harm.

2 The council has provided the Inquiry with documents
3 which detail and explain the current model of safe 4 holding, which is termed 'promoting positive behaviour'.
5 The framework was introduced in 2016 and training is 6 delivered to social care staff in children's houses, 7 older people in residential services, learning 8 disability services and homelessness services. 400 to 9 450 staff are trained annually, with the training 10 requiring both e-learning and attendance in a classroom
11 setting.

12 The training is refreshed and takes place alongside 13 training in other topics, such as nurturing, adverse 14 experiences, emotional containment, and the impact of 15 trauma, the ethos being to promote a holistic approach.

16 The council believes strongly that it is not simply 17 the physical safe hold techniques which require to be 18 carefully considered and managed, rather the focus of 19 training and education should be on the social care 20 staff's entire approach to caring for vulnerable 21 individuals.

22 Since the introduction of the nurture framework in 23 2021, the council's experience in recent years is that 24 incidents where physical intervention is required to 25 ensure safety have decreased. The council is currently

1       developing a system to improve how data in relation to 2       physical restraint is gathered and reported on, but as 3       an example of current statistics, in 2023 there were 255
4       recorded incidents of safe holds, while in 2024 this 5       reduced to 152. Of course, it is accepted, my Lady, 6       that that's a limited sample size.

7   LADY SMITH: Yes.

8   MR PUGH: It is, of course, accepted that it reflects
9       recorded incidents only, but the council submits that it 10      does reflect a significant cultural change from the 11      terms of the applicant evidence that was heard in this 12      phase, where it is clear that restraints were 13      commonplace and reported by many essentially to be 14      a daily occurrence.

15   LADY SMITH: Your reference to data reminds me of the stress 16      that Amanda Hatton from City of Edinburgh Council put on 17      the importance in the modern world, because we can 18      gather it, and we can make it readily accessible, of 19      data, particularly in this field. I don't know if your 20      Council has followed that, but she explained how she 21      feels in a much stronger position if she has access to 22      all relevant data in relation to the work that they are 23      doing with children. This is the sort of thing you can 24      track, if you keep the data and you make it readily 25      accessible.

1 MR PUGH: Well, indeed, and as I will come on to say in 2 relation to allying this type of training to a proper 3 complaints procedure that allows these things to be 4 considered.

5 LADY SMITH: Indeed.

6 MR PUGH: I haven't specifically discussed with the council
7 Ms Hatton's evidence, but there have been a constant 8 watch on the Inquiry by senior members of the council 9 staff, so I will certainly make sure that is passed on, 10 my Lady.

11 LADY SMITH: Your council are probably aware she is 12 a relatively recent arrival in Edinburgh, 2021, having 13 come from south of the border, and came in, and has 14 implemented some new ideas on organisation and 15 management, which, as I say, you may find of interest.

16 MR PUGH: I will certainly make sure that that has been 17 observed, my Lady.

18 LADY SMITH: Thank you.

19 MR PUGH: The current Promoting Positive Behaviour model is 20 under continuous review by the council. In January 2022
21 a review of the physical intervention techniques taught 22 by the Promoting Positive Behaviour training was 23 conducted by experts at Robert Gordon University, and we 24 have provided some of that at appendix 1 to this 25 submission.

1           Changes are regularly made to the terms of the 2           training to reflect the council's developing 3           trauma-informed approach, and we have provided evidence 4           of that at appendices 2 and 4.

5           In May 2024, a full-scale review of the Promoting 6           Positive Behaviour programme was conducted by the Clyde 7           Valley Promoting Positive Behaviour Strategic Governance
8           Group. Changes to the programme were made to reflect 9           the experiences of stakeholder councils and that has 10          been provided at appendix 3, and the Inquiry can 11          consider those at its leisure.

12          The council is committed to conducting reviews of 13          Promoting Positive Behaviour and the terms of its 14          Promoting Positive Behaviour training in order to ensure 15          that practice is developed in line with the experiences 16          of practitioners.

17          Moving then away from specifically restraint and on 18          to training and policies more generally. The Inquiry 19          heard evidence that there were no formal qualification 20          requirements for staff employed in residential care 21          services until the SSSC introduced the register for 22          social care staff in 2003. There was then a phased 23          introduction of mandatory qualification requirements
24          throughout the following years.

25          The residential institutions covered within this

1 phase had no formal qualification requirements and staff
2 generally commenced employment entirely untrained.
3 On-the-job training was limited, inconsistent, and 4 informal. Staff members largely spoke of limited formal 5 regulation, or independent audit, and starkly spoke of 6 no formal staff code of conduct. Recruitment practices 7 at Kerelaw School were in particular the subject of 8 justified criticism in the Frizzell report.

9 There, staff were largely drawn from one small 10 community and mostly knew each other, and that's a point
11 I will return to, my Lady.

12 LADY SMITH: Yes.

13 MR PUGH: The historically unregulated landscape of child 14 services is unrecognisable when compared to the current 15 position. Residential care staff are now required, as 16 a minimum, to undertake an SVQ 3 in care for children 17 and young people.

18 Following a question asked of Ms Millar in her 19 evidence during Chapter 10, the council provided 20 statistics in relation to the qualification levels of 21 residential care staff following the introduction of the 22 registration requirements in 2005. At present, each 23 residential care worker is required to undertake 24 a qualification for registration after six months in 25 post, unless they come with an appropriate qualification

1       that can be evidenced.

2           Staff training is rigorous and regular. All staff
3       are registered with the SSSC and required to complete at 4       least 30 hours of training per year. A mandatory 5       training programme for residential care exceeds this,
6       providing a range of training, including a four-day 7       nurture training, a three-and-a-half-day Promoting 8       Positive Behaviour programme, child protection, adult 9       support and protection, fire safety, suicide awareness 10      and intervention, as well as training and supporting 11      individuals who are neurodivergent, and that teams have 12      five hours of protected time each week which focuses on 13      the integration of learning through coaching from 14      a range of partners, including speech and language, and 15      educational psychology.

16           My Lady, I appreciate that many of those are beyond
17      the scope of this Inquiry, but the training package
18      itself seemed to us to be of interest --

19   LADY SMITH: Yes, thank you.

20   MR PUGH: -- to the Inquiry, to understand more than just 21      what, I suppose, is directly relevant.

22           The service has developed a Nurture Through 23      Leadership programme that provides ongoing training, 24      learning and coaching to leadership teams to support the 25      implementation and integration of nurture, being

1 supported by colleagues in education, including a team
2 of educational psychologists.

3 The service has engaged with night shift colleagues
4 to understand and respond to their specific learning 5 needs. The outcome of this consultation has been 6 developed through the Nurture At Nights programme, which 7 provides on-site training and coaching, provided by 8 senior practitioners, with the support of a senior 9 learning and development officer. This work has been 10 undertaken to support best practice in Glasgow and 11 ensure that children and young people receive the best 12 possible care when living in a residential house.

13 LADY SMITH: What does that title 'Nurture At Nights', 14 denote, Mr Pugh?

15 MR PUGH: It denotes the specific, as I understand it -- the 16 start of it is a bit I skipped over, that appears 17 earlier in the submissions.

18 LADY SMITH: Yes, I thought I read it somewhere.

19 MR PUGH: Yes, at paragraph 7 we talk about the development 20 of following The Promise of the nurture framework.

21 LADY SMITH: Yes, yes.

22 MR PUGH: I don't know specifically, my Lady, but I suspect 23 that the Nurture At Nights element of that recognises 24 the particular place of night staff within these 25 residential houses.

1 LADY SMITH: Residential care --

2 MR PUGH: Indeed.

3 LADY SMITH: -- and the differences in giving night time
4 care as compared to day time.

5 MR PUGH: Indeed, night time care, and also if your Ladyship
6 recalls the evidence that Ms Millar gave of the current 7 position in residential care was that there would be 8 a reduced number of staff on at nights.

9 LADY SMITH: Yes, of course.

10 MR PUGH: I think that's a matter that your Ladyship 11 explored with Ms Millar.

12 LADY SMITH: Yes.

13 MR PUGH: I am almost certain that it is in relation to 14 that, my Lady, but I can, if it is needed, provide any 15 further clarification.

16 LADY SMITH: That would make sense, thank you.

17 MR PUGH: Paragraph 25, the council has previously provided
18 the current code of conduct for social care staff. It 19 is important that care staff know what is expected of 20 them and what support they are entitled to expect from 21 the council in return.

22 It is recognised, my Lady -- this again is 23 important -- that work in children's residential 24 services, whilst enjoyable and immensely rewarding, can 25 be challenging and stressful. It is these challenging

1       and stressful moments where training policies and 2       organisational ethos become acutely important. The 3       evidence heard by the Inquiry has demonstrated that at 4       times there was institutional reluctance to develop 5       practice surrounding childcare, and specifically 6       a reluctance to learn lessons from previous 7       investigations. Again, we have highlighted the lack of 8       a response to the Bennett and Righton report being the 9       most obvious of those.

10      LADY SMITH: Yes.

11      MR PUGH: The council's approach, which has been its 12       approach now for a number of years, seeks to place the 13       nurture of children at the centre of staff training and 14       policy.

15       In relation to complaint handling, the evidence 16       heard by the Inquiry demonstrated a clear lack of 17       sufficient complaints procedures in each of the 18       institutions explored. Some applicants described lip 19       service being paid to complaints yet no formal action 20       being taken. Staff members who were the subject of 21       serious complaints continued to work, whilst lengthy 22       investigations were undertaken, often with limited or no 23       resolution.

24       The council acknowledges that high-quality training 25       procedures are inadequate without a robust and

1 independent complaints procedure to ensure that issues 2 are quickly and appropriately identified and dealt with.
3 To put it acutely, my Lady, they go hand in hand.

4 LADY SMITH: Yes, of course.

5 MR PUGH: Without those procedures, children and young 6 people would continue to be placed at risk of harm.
7 Abusers may continue to perpetrate serious abuse for 8 many years, a stark example of that being the shocking 9 and sustained conduct of Matt George and John Muldoon at 10 Kerelaw.

11 However, even when complaints procedures exist, the 12 culture within the particular care provision can impact 13 upon whether residents or other staff members feel 14 willing and able to report incidents of concern. That 15 was particularly the case at Kerelaw where, due to the 16 recruitment practices I have already alluded to, staff 17 members largely came from the same local community and 18 were known to each other in a personal capacity.

19 It is essential, my Lady, that a culture of openness 20 and transparency is cultivated by local authorities so 21 that the complaints process is trusted by complainers 22 and those who are subject to complaints.

23 At paragraph 28, we have highlighted some of the 24 other documentation that's been provided as appendices 25 to this.

1           I should say, my Lady, your Ladyship may have 2           noticed appendix 6 was not a document created by the 3           council, it is a document created by the Scottish Public 4           Services Ombudsman, that's simply a typographical error, 5           it is relied upon by the council in preparing its 6           guidance.

7   LADY SMITH: Thank you.

8   MR PUGH: Provision of education is the penultimate topic, 9           and from paragraph 29, while much of the applicant 10          evidence focused on particular incidents of physical and 11          emotional abuse, the wider context of the applicants' 12          experiences within residential services is important in 13          understanding how being in local authority care impacted 14          their long-term well-being, education, or more 15          appropriately, my Lady, the lack thereof, was 16          an important factor in many of the applicants' 17          experiences.

18          Residents entered assessment centres, and I have 19          listened with care to the discussion your Ladyship has 20          just had with Mr Young around assessment centres --

21   LADY SMITH: Yes.

22   MR PUGH: -- but for the council that was Larchgrove, 23          Beechwood and Cardross Park, with the expectation that 24          they would only be staying for a short period.
25          Education was not prioritised and often was entirely

1        lacking, despite residents often staying for a number of 2        months and in some instances years.

3    LADY SMITH:    Yes.

4    MR PUGH:    I suspect of particular concern to your Ladyship,
5        in many respects, the all-female nature of Beechwood
6        meant that education amounted to learning homemaking 7        skills and crafts.

8    LADY SMITH:    There is nothing wrong with teaching homemaking 9        skills and crafts to all children.

10   MR PUGH:    Of course, my Lady.

11   LADY SMITH:    It is just it is not a substitute for the other 12        aspects of educating a child.

13   MR PUGH:    Of course it is not.    Of course it is not.

14           Kerelaw was notionally both a residential home and 15        a school, but the evidence from applicants was the 16        education provision was at the very least, at the very 17        least, not suitable to the needs of individual 18        residents.

19           Throughout the tenure of the relevant 20        establishments, children of school age in Scotland were 21        entitled to education, it is inexcusable that the 22        establishments failed to meet these duties in that 23        regard.

24           Current local authority structure means that within 25        Glasgow City Council, social work and education services

1 work closely together to ensure that all children and 2 young people in residential care have an allocated 3 school placement and provide outreach support where that 4 is required.

5 Each house, that's a residential house, my Lady, has 6 an allocated educational link worker who is responsible 7 for coordinating the education plans for children and 8 young people alongside the children's house, the school 9 and the young person. A range of partners support 10 education to offer diverse and individualised care plans 11 that reflect the strengths and needs of the young 12 people, this includes both school-based provision, as 13 well as off-site teaching and learning opportunities.

14 Undeniably, securing school attendance for 15 vulnerable children and young people has become 16 an increasing challenge following the pandemic, but it 17 is an issue felt throughout the school population as 18 a whole.

19 Horseplay was the final topic that we identified in 20 a number of these chapters that the council participated 21 in. At times what might be termed 'horseplay' took the 22 form of organised fighting, and that was an issue that 23 was prevalent in the earlier evidence, particularly 24 pertaining to Larchgrove and Kerelaw. The conduct 25 described by applicants captures, what we would suggest,

1 a macho culture at those establishments and undoubtedly,
2 my Lady, that culture allowed abuse to occur undetected.

3 LADY SMITH: Yes.

4 MR PUGH: The structure of residential care is now wholly 5 different. Residents are cared for in smaller houses 6 with fewer children within the same placement. Although 7 the council seeks to cultivate close bonds between staff
8 and residents, qualification and training requirements
9 make clear that boundaries to that relationship exist 10 and cannot be crossed. In changing the model of 11 residential care following the closure of Kerelaw, the 12 council submits that although incidents between 13 residents occur on an individual basis, the macho 14 culture previously prevalent is now eradicated.

15 The council have previously provided statistics to 16 the Inquiry in relation to the health and safety 17 incidents within children's residential services between 18 2021 and 2023. Those statistics show a limited number 19 of physical incidents within services in recent years.
20 The majority of reported incidents are attributable to 21 smoking, slips, trips, falls and damage to property. In 22 2023 there were 22 recorded incidents of knives or 23 offensive weapons within residential care, with one 24 recorded incident of horseplay.

25 Then just trying to summarise that in relation to

1 the present position, Susanne Millar, throughout her
2 evidence within this chapter, testified that the nature
3 and structure of the current residential care provision 4 within Glasgow City Council is entirely different from 5 the establishments covered within this Inquiry phase.

6 The council no longer runs secure accommodation, nor 7 does it run residential schools. Instead, children and 8 young people are cared for within 19 children's houses
9 located within the city boundary. The model is intended 10 to feel homely, the houses being intentionally 11 indistinguishable from the surrounding locality, in 12 direct contrast to the institutions of old.

13 Each house has between six and eight children 14 residing within it and placements are tailored to the 15 needs of each individual young person. Childcare plans 16 are carefully created with direct input from children 17 and young people themselves. Residential care staff are 18 required to have knowledge and understanding of the care 19 plan of each child within the service. Within this 20 model it is hoped the institutional feel of previous 21 residential care services has been lost in favour of 22 a family-based environment.

23 Ms Millar described a personal view that residential 24 care services will always require to be provided by the 25 council in some form, given the particular needs of some

1 children and young people in the council's care. The 2 current model is considered by the council to be the 3 best way to meet that need whilst ensuring the welfare 4 of residents is protected.

5 Thank you, my Lady.

6 LADY SMITH: Thank you very much, Mr Pugh.

7 Well, that completes the submissions that we have 8 planned for today, so I will stop now.

9 We will be sitting again tomorrow afternoon, not 10 tomorrow morning. The details of who we should be 11 hearing from are on the website, but just to remind 12 anybody who wants to know now: the Church of Scotland 13 Social Care Council, otherwise known as CrossReach; the 14 Archdiocese of St Andrews and Edinburgh; Loaningdale
15 School Company Limited; Dr Guthrie's School; Rossie
16 Young People's Trust; Aberdeen City Council; Inverclyde
17 Council; and Kibble Education and Care Centre are all 18 organisations who will have the opportunity to present 19 closing submissions tomorrow, which, as I say, will 20 start at 2 o'clock, and I think we will manage to finish 21 those tomorrow afternoon, they should fit in the time 22 available.

23 Mr MacAulay, is there anything else you need to 24 address me on at the moment?

25 MR MACAULAY: I don't think so, my Lady.

1 LADY SMITH: Very well. I will rise now until tomorrow
2 afternoon at 2 o'clock.
